FLOWERS. BY MARY HOWITT. Buttercups and daisies-

Oh, the pretty flowers-Coming ere the spring time, To tell of sunny hours. While the trees are leaflless, While the skies are bare, Battercups and daises Spring up here and there.

Ere the Snowdrop peepeth, Ere the Crocus bold-Ere the early Primrose Opes its paly gold-Somewhere on a sunny bank Buttercups are bright: Somewhere 'mong the frozen grass Peeps the Daisy white.

Like the hardy flowers, Like the children poor Playing in their sturdy health By their mother's door; Purple with the north wind. Yet alert and bold; Fearing not and caring not, Though they be a-cold.

What to them is wealth? What are stormy showers Buttercups and Daises Are these human flowers. He who gave them hardship, And a life of care, Gave them likewise hardy strength And patient hearts to bear.

Welcome, yellow Buttercups, Welcome, Daises white; Ye are in my spirit Visioned a delightvisioned a delight—
Coming in the spring-time, Of sunny hours to tell, Speaking to our hearts of Him Who doeth all things well.

RELIGION.

BY WILLIAM LEGGET. Like snow that falls where waters glide, Earth's pleasures fade away; They melt in Time's destroying tide, And cold are while they stay: But joys that from Religion flow, Like stars that gild the night, Amid the darkest gloom of wo, Shine forth with sweetest light, Religion's ray no clouds obscure; But o'er the Christian's soul It sheds a radiance calm and pure, Though tempests round him roll: His heart may break 'neath sorrow's stroke; But to its latest thrill, Like diamonds shining when they're broke, Religion lights it still?

[From the N. E. Washingtonian.] THE CONTRARY ONE. REAL PROPERTY BY JOHN S. ADAMS,

Once on a time, a good old man Walked on a river's shore; He'd lost his wife, and mournfully His loss he did deplore.

> For she had, in a maddened freak, Unto the river hied; Unto the river nied;
> First kissed the wave that made Then, sank beneath the tide.

And ever since that woful hour, He'd wandered up the stream, To find the once loved form of her Who lived in his esteem.

Hans was a man of Dutch descent, Withal, a good old liver, Who loved his pipe and buxom wife, And dwelt heside the river.

He, meeting with the good old man, As he was wand'ring by, Inquired why he did weep and mourn-Why so take on and sigh,

He told him-then, with much surprise, The Dutchman wished he'd note, That every thing upon the wave, Did down the river float.

'I know it,' said the good old man, But contrary was my wife; She'll be as contrary now she's dead, As she was in her life.

And as the river floateth down, I'll wander up its side; For one so contrary as she, Will float against the tide.'

PREPARED FOR DISPLAY.

OR A HINT TO YOUNG LADIES. 'The education of women tends chiefly towards the ntellect; but it is to the cultivation of the moral sense, to the cultivation of the heart, that it should be directed. Were we to enlighten the heart, virtues alone would remain, and instead of women we might have angels.'

Thus writes a French author on the subject of 'the Education of Females.' The remark was brought most forcibly to mind, in a conversation I lately held with a do now-their knowledge of music and French notwithkind and obseserving old gentleman. We had both been spending an evening at the resiuse their mother's phrase, 'just finished their education.' The company was large, and the young ladies had ample opportunity to show their numerous accomplish-Miss Sarah, the eldest, was quite a musician, at least in her and her mother's opinion, and Miss Jane could draw beautifully, and translate French to admiration; also both the young ladies were quite proficient in worsted work, embroidering and mending lace so that it could not be seen, and divers other elegant nothings stoo unferous to mention.'

All this had been notified to the company, first in conversation by the mother, and second by each young la-just before me, and old Mrs. Gray on my left; of course dy herself, from being called out, rather indirectly to be I was immoveable, until one of the young ladies should menced by opening the piano and inviting any of the therefore change her seat and leave, some space, and I out again; 1'll hey the mean critter jerked into jail of What did he do? persisted the question of the piano and inviting any of the therefore change her seat and leave, some space, and I out again; 1'll hey the mean critter jerked into jail of ladies 'to give us some music.' but all declined being the first to play, and so the young lady sat down herself, well two or three marches, and sung one or two songs; all of which were loudly praised ed to wear it again. I had rather stay at home by the company, and declared to be 'perfect,' 'beauti- she, than always wear the same dress.' ful,' &c., and when she rose from her instrument, a keen observer might have thought from her countenance, that she had been doing something extraordinary, so elate was she with triumph and satisfation. Two or three other young ladies were called upon to perform, the same church that mother does, and so we think it is and then Jane contrived to bring herself into notice by letting a drawing fall out of a music book, and exclaiming 'Why, Sarah, here is that landscape we searched so long for last week! How could it get among your mu-

Perhaps Miss Jane little suspected that more than half of the company would be informed by her little roguish brother, before the evening was out, that the landscape had been placed with the music by her own fair B. showing herself off by singing a duett with Charles hands that very morning—with what intentions can be Graham, and easily suspected.

The ruse succeeded, and a few moments found the centre-table covered with Miss Jane's drawings, and surrounded by a seemingly admiring circle of friends, who were in raptures at the young ladies talents; and, 'how true to nature'-is it not beautifully colored'-'did you ever see any thing done better,' &c., resounding throughout the room.

Of course Miss Jane's cheeks glowed quite as much as her sister's, and after various patterns of worsted em- land.' broidery had been shown, and the young lady's Album examined to find the original piece she had written upon ligion, and all that sort of thing, yet making herself so leaving school, they both seemed to stand upon 'higher forward in company. Ma wanted me to believe she eminence' than the rest of the company, and were allow- took the whole charge of her mother's family, and nursed by their mother to spend the rest of the evening in ed old Mrs. Elm when she was sick—but I don't believe, the background.

Now the old gentleman first alluded to, had been a much. keen observer of all that was passing; and perhaps both mother and daughter would have been startled somewhat out of their complacency, could they have seen even had a beautiful satin dress bespoke for her, but my with what serious reflections he was regarding their display. Indeed, it caused something like wonder in his think there's any truth in the report of her being engaged mind, that people could be proud of showing such trifling things as the result of the 'highly finished education' we were so minutely informed upon, by the lost Miss Sarah's reply; however, I had heard quite gratified and loquacious mother; and he longed to repeat to them the rebuke of the philosopher of old-'Ahonor and fame, at but half the expense.

Upon breaking up of the company, I was fortunate, and as the way was long, I anticipated much pleasure in his conversation, as he was one whose lips seldom openthe gift of speech to be accounted for hereafter.

I commenced by saying I had spent the evening rather more agreeably than I had at first expected. 'Have you, indeed?' answered he-I am glad of it and heartily wish I could confess even one agreeable feeling throughout it.' 'And have you not enjoyed yourself?' I asked Indeed, I cannot say that I have,' he seriously reinto requisition. I have been the whole evening trying to find out for what Mrs H, has educated her daughters; were as necessary in making a lady as music, drawing, time the good ship so-and-so, left its port of clearance, and as I presume they are but a specimen of the present most fashionable mode of bringing up young ladies, I should like to know what real designs mothers have in view in thus rearing their daughters. 'It cannot be to prepare them for the duties that a wait them as wives and mothers, for surely even the most feeble reason would point to a course more to the purpose; yet upon looking round upon all my acquaintance. I cannot find one mother who seems to have more in view, (judging by her mode,) than what administers to the gratification of the mind and senses .-Not one of them seems to think of the heart with its nu merous springs of action, more or less polluted by the mire of selfishness, and which is in reality the reservoir rom which all their future actions will be colored!

'Take for instance the daughters of our hostess this evening. Fine girls they are to look at; and if instead of a little music and a few drawings, I had seen more benevolent attention paid to the company, more respect and notice to the aged, and more sound practical sense in their conversation, I should have known them to be well brought up girls; though I had never heard a whisper of their grand education, and should have admired and respected them far more than it is possible for me to standing.

Here I ventured to remark that the Misses H. appeardence of a mutual friend, whose two daughters had, to ed at least amiable and well intentioned, though their affectations were indeed like a dark cloud over the sunniest parts.

> 'As to the amiability of Miss Sarah, I had an oppor tunity of judging,' replied my friend, 'and though I am not in the habit of repeating the unguarded words of a moment, yet being assured they are often the sure in dex of the speaker's heart, I will tell you of a little scene I chanced to be a witness of, and you may judge for yourself.

Whilst the refreshments were being handed round, I found myself wedged in one corner, with the sofa at tricks I've hearn on lately.' my right side, Miss Sarah and one of her young friends of their remarks.' Did you ever see anything more ridiculous than that ld dress of Maria B's; I declare she ought to be asham-

'Oh! you know her father is quite poor,' replied Miss Sarah, 'and can't afford her even decent things. I should'nt have invited her here this evening, if mother best to show her some attention to please ma.'

But I wish you could have seen her at Mary E's the other night-ny the way, why were you not there?'

'Oh, they are such low bred people, ma don't like to have us associate much with them; so I plainly let Mary understand I did not wish any invitation, and of course she did not send one.

Well, you lost a treat, I must say. There was Maria 'Now, she did not really make such a fool of herself!

interrupted Miss Sarah. Treally am astonished that Mr. Graham demeaned himself so much as to sing with her, such a screech owl as she is. I never could abide her singing.' 'Oh, you ought to have heard how it was applauded

-and Mr. Graham said he had not heard any thing so sweet since he was in France; and she looked as proudin her old dress, as if she was the queen of Eng-

I dare say; what a hypocrite she is, pretending re a word of it, or she could not find time to go out so

Oh! she did nurse Mrs. Elm, I believe, for I hear that the old lady offered to make her a handsome present, and lady was to proud too accept it, it seems. But do you

'At this instant the waiter approached, and I amiability; and I quite congratulate myself that I knew las! the time and talents you have wasted in sequiring the Maria B. she had been speaking so freely of knew such useles knowledge, might have raised you to virtue, her to be a pious and amiable young lady, as far removed from selfishness as the imperfect creatures of our sinful world can be; and moreover, I had happened also at least in my own opinion, to get his attendance home; to attend the party alluded to, and well remember the sweet and touching manner in which the young lady had secompanied Mr. Graham in a popular ballad; and I ed themselves, 'but with wisdom,' and who considered longed to tell Miss Sarah that nothing I had heard this evening could compare to it, although she seemed to have such a comfortable opinion of her own powers as

Now, suppose instead of her music and spon, she had been taught the grace that hopeth all things, and preferreth another to itself—suppose she had learned that envy, and detraction, and speaking evil of her companions, were as much to be avoided as the small pox or plied; but I have plenty of food for reflection, and I do any other loathsome disease—and that gentleness, meek

&c., would she not then have been far more lovely and superior to the fashionable machine she has appeared this evening?

'Ah! it is a grand mistake parents are making in thus have to suffer. The young girl taken from her father's home, where she has been sheltered with such tender- after week and month after month, wears away, and ness, and made the mistress of a family without the least knowledge or idea of the duties appertaining to her cherished ones who were lust seen on board that missing situation, cannot but blame the parent who neglected to prepare her more fully for the real station she was more left behind them fathers, mothers, sisters, brothers likely to be called to, even if it had been at the expense of the so-called accomplishments that now are, she finds, of little or no use to her.'

By this time we had arrived at home, and I soon after took leave of my old friend; but his words remained with full force upon my memory, and made me more alive in observing the actions of those of my young friends who were styled 'the most highly educated.' And candor compels me to say, that there are not two among them whom I would wish a daughter of my own to re semble, although most of them are quite proficient in music, drawing, French, and beautiful worsted work.

HOW JEDEDIAH WAS SUCKED IN.

'Is the 'Squire tu hum?' inquired an elongated indiv idual yesterday, who pushed his head into the Record er's office. It being about dinner hour none of the officials happened to be 'to hum;' but a couple of citizens who were lounging inside, invited him in, and inquired

'Well,'says he, in a beautiful nasal, 'my busine int much, but du tell me which is the 'Squire?' 'He is at dinner, sir' answered one of the pair, 'but you have anything very urgent we will send for him.' 'Well I aint got much in pertickler,' answered th eastern man; 'but jest this mornin' a fellar of the 'jinin State of Illinois played me one of the alfiredest mean

What was it like?' inquired the listener. 'Well, it wan,t much like anythin', says he, 'but ar all created suck in. Where is that 'Squire?' he burst

'Well, 'twant much of anythin' except a sell,' said he; and then, breaking out again, he exclaimed: 'Oh, ledediah Dexter! that anythin' cute as you're allowed tu be shud be draw'd in tu sech a trade by a yeller lookin', ague-shakin', corn raisen' sarpent as that feller. "Was he a Sucker?" inquired the gent.

Well he wan't much else,' said the afflicted

But you have not told us what his offence was,' con-

inned the other. 'No,' said he, 'I aint, and what's wusser a darned light, I'm ashamed tu-all cre-a-tion! that I shud a been so teetotally green! I swow,' says he, starting, I b'lieve I won't tell it—I'll jest let the mean varmint accounted for from there being a smaller quantity of puslide. It won't bear tellin' on. Why, of they shud trid matter in the small piece of potato than in the neer it down at Connecticut, I couldn't never show my. self at any futur' thanksgivin' in them latitudes—they'd holler meal at me jest as quick as they'd clap eyes on me.' 'Oh! come,' shouted both listeners, 'you are not going to leave without enlightening us, now that you have raised our curiosity.

Well, I guess it won't hurt you if you don't heer it, ditors informed him that it was absolutely necessary that he should stop and lodge his complaint, for that evident cannot tell what the operation is, but name these things ly some wrong had been committed, and if he kept silent for consideration. In some cases cut potatoes have yieldand allowed it to pass unpunished he would be conniving at the evil, and thereby make himself liable

'Is that the law, you?' inquired the bitten complain-

Both listeners signified the affirmative to his query. 'Well, I won't go agin the law much,' says Jed, 'so you kin hev the hull upshot of this in a minit, and you'll allow it is mighty mean. A Illinois feller this mornin' walked into my shop, where I'm merhandizin' alongside on the market, and got tu dickerin' some butter with me for groceries and other notions. His pors of cow's grease were dreadful nice on top, and tasted like new nilk arter spring grass—it just tucked me all of a heap, and I bargain'd for all the critter had, and sought to sellin' him the little fixins in exchange. He looked so etarnal soft and sawnyed round so all fired green, that I didn't once dream of the critter's bein' tricky, so the trade was did up mity short and he travelled. Well, jest a minit sence I turned a pot cout to sell a customer some, and I swan tu man of two-thirds on it wan't an Ingin meal dumplin'!

A burst of laughter here broke from his auditors, and as they appeared to keep on at it, instead of sympathizing with Jed., he raised himself proudly up under his load of injuries, and moved towards the door.

'Ah! ha, ha, ha! Ingin dumplins, ah, ha!' shouted one of the convulsed listeners, as Jed. was retreating. 'You need'nt take on so,' says Jed.; 'for If, he don't think of his sins when he swallows that tea I sold him, a songstress. So much for Miss Sarah's amiability and then I'm mistaken in the yarb. issing Vessels.

How often we meet with the above phrase in our Marine records, and yet how little do most readers not think my observing powers were ever more brought ness, in honor preferring one another, and a kind, realize of its painful significance. A missing vessel! with its canvass spread to the favoring breeze, bound to some distant port, and that no tidings have since been received from her. Long and anxiously have fond ones awaited tidings of her arrival at her port of destination, rearing up their daughters. Both parties in the end but no answering voice has come from across the waters to quiet their throbbing breasts. Day after day, week still no revelation discloses the fate of those vessel. Those for whom anxiety is cherished have may be wives and chidren, and Ot who shall describ the intenseness of anguish which wrings their hearts as, one by one, the hopes upon which they have fondly hung, give way and full prostrate to the ground! Every paper is scanned with avidity-not for its sickening tales or its ordinary news, for these are all stale and of little worth, but that some faint streak of light may beam in from the missing ones' by which their fate may be known.

News from every distant port is looked for with intense anxiety, in the hope that, some friendly sail having fallen in with the 'missing vessel' and carried its dear ones to parts unknown, intelligence of their safety and prospective return may be received. But time wears away and still nothing of light is gained. O the harrowing of soul, as one by one its hopes are cut off!-O the dreadfulness of suspense! Any intelligence, absolutely the most distressing, if positive, were pleasure compared with such wretched uncertainty-such dizzy and sickening vibrations between hope and fear.

Our country friends who live far away from the ocean's roar, know little of the trials incident to a seaman's fireside. To them the storm has few terrors .-They hear it roar, but it lulls them to sleep. Not so the nariner's wife, or daughter, or mother. The Storm King speaks in terrible notes to her. His voice is husky and his breath is the siroe to her soul. She hears, but she sleeps not. She lies down, but in every blast is mingled the creaking of spars, the flapping of sails, the sundering of shrouds, and the shrieks of her friends. Of how many, even in this town, is this literally true!-To how many does news of a 'missing vessel' come like POTATOES.

As potatoes rotted very extensivly year before last, and last year the disease was quite severe in some secfree from it the present season; therefore we should guard against predisposing causes and they are numerous as his been shown in many articles which we have nourner, and the fullest grown one I've seed lately— published. We should also use various preventives, such as salt, lime, plaster, ashes, &c., that have been found useful, if not effectual. As to cutting potatoes, we do not believe that it has the mjurious effect that some have supposed; and one of our correspondents, a few weeks ago, showed that his potatoes rotted less when they were cut. This may be large, whole potato.

We have no doubt that in some cases the cutting may be injurious, if planted immediately after outtings and the recently cut part comes in contact with very wet earth, the water may mingle with the juices of the potate and penetrate through it, producing an unhealthy effect; and it may be that very dry earth will have an said he; and he was about to move, when one of his au- unfavorable effect in absorbing the moisture from the potato, coming in contact with a freshly out partitus We ed much less than whole ones; again they have done equally as well. If potatoes are cut awhile before planting, a crust is formed over the cut part, which will doubtless prevent any injurious effect from that cause. Cultivator.

Pretty good .- Who is the author of the following we know not. It was found in an old newspaper that looked as if it had been printed when Adam was a

SATURDAY MORNING. MAY 22, 1847.

SHOE AND LEATHER MANUFACTURE.

We are pleased to learn that there is now a prospect that the capital and labor invested in these branches of industry, will soon receive, for a short time at least, a living remuneration.

The bulk of the stock of leather, in the market, has been for some months past, in the hands of the importers of hides, who had manufactured it, when the sales in hides were very tardy. Most of this stock has of late er, so much practical and necessary information. gradually changed hands, having been purchased by those particularly engaged in the Leather trade. The demand for leather is good while the stock is very limited, and k is the opinion of competent juges, that the prices will soon average as high as at any previous time for 10 or 12 years.

The following quotation of sales in the New York market, which we copy from the Herald, may, we think be relied upon, as indicative of an improved and encouraging state of the leather trade:-

LEATHER.—The public sale yesterday was the best Amesbury of the season, and the entire catalogue was disposed of of the season, and the entire catalogue at an advice of a half a cent per pound on common qualities, and a cent on lirst quality hemlock tanned leather, Boxford. as compared with the last public sale some two weeks since. The following is the range of the prices at the Light and middling weights. 15 to 16 1-2 Heavy weights. Good damaged. 12 1-4 to 13 3-4 Terms of sale four months. The buyers were mostly from the easr, who bought for immediate consumption.—

It is estimated that there will be at least 10,000 sides of hemlock sole leather less produced this year than last for this market, and that the consumption will be con-to be very light. In proportion to the improvement in leather has been also, the advance in the price of shoes, which on some Rockport kinds of work is as high as 15 per cent within the last Rowley three months. There is also an urgent demand for Salem workmen, and wages are liberal.

The generosity of Salem towards Danvers, even in matters of clashing interest, as asserted by the Editor W. Newbury of the Salem Gazette, (referring to the Essex Railroad and Malden Railroads,) is well illustrated by an observation of Mr. Cheate, before the Railroad committee, when he said,-"Certainly the father who being asked for fish gave his son a serpent, was a hard man; but that other father can scarcely be said to have shown kindly and parental disposition, who being asked for bread ehoked his child to death with fish. But as our brother editor seems to have thrown himself back a la Mexicanazinto the bombastic entrenchments of "his poslive knowledge," we feel no disposition to ill naturedly hombard him there, out of the quiet enjoyment of his cigarritto.

BANKING EXTRAORDINARY.

England Bank, Boston, is another illustration of the al years, and is one of the most worthy men in Essex maxim, that "large fish run clear, while small fish are County. He was fairly elected at the first trial, bu maxim, that large user the close, the same single inquiry, as to was counted out in consequence of an informality in the who was in the wrong in this business? It seems that the President negotiated paper for the Bank, and in addition to the proper discount chargeable, he took a comthe tune of $65,000. the subject was the all-engrosssing topic, a gentleman in conversation with Gen. Jackson asked the old ver who, in the event of the war, could be found to le old veteran armies. The reply of the venerable ex-President shows to it may be traced directly the sele tion of Gen. Taylor, and as a consequence victories won by him in Mexico. It was in these words: "An old planter, down the coast by the name of Taylor is the best man I knew, and he will do it well too."

The above paragraph-has been extensively copied by the Democratic papers, with the evident design of flattery to the prophetic prediction of the great embodiment of war and locofocoism, Andrew Jackson. The incident, whether true or false, will we fear lead some ignorant and incredulous dissenter from the government policy to inquire whether Mr Polk did really believe that the annexation of Texas would be a "bloodless achievement," while at the same time he commissioned his friends to as certain the opinion of an "illustrious predecessor," as to the man who in case of fight, had in him the most gameblood and wore the longest spurs.

But we have noticed with a little surprise that some of our exchanges have expressed much horror at the thought that the commandment to keep holy the Sabbath had been broken, yet have hardly opened their mouths when nearly every other in the decalogue has been openly violated. For our own part we cannot be persunded that it is any more criminal to fight on the Sabbath-day than it is to kill, to commit adultery, to covet and steal a neighbor's land or anything that is a neighbor's, and to take the name of the Lord in vain, on any other day, and if there is any necessity for all the sins. or indeed any cause for the war of which they are the immediate results, and which is good or evil, then there may be some palliation and justification for fighting it and thus doing good on the Sabbath-day.

COUNTY COMMISSIONER ELECTION. We are gratified to learn by the following return which we copy from the Salem Register, of Thursday, that the regularly nominated candidates—John F Baker, Esq., of Beverly, and Dan Weed, Esq., of Lawrence,—for standing and special Commissioners were elected on Monday last. And we are pleased the more particularly in the election of Mr. BAKER, of Beverly, because there are but very few men in the community who so fully possess or deserve the confidence and esteem of the public, and also because there are but few persons in this county, who can bring to the assistance in the performance of the duties of County Commission-

The next winter, 1846, the referred petition of D. Pingree, and others, was called up, and at the same time the South Reading project was started. The result of that winter, was, that the Committee were equally divided upon the merits of the Malden case—that the House voted for the road, 122 in its favor, and 32 againstand that it was finally slain by a vote of the Senate.— This was the second slaughter.

The South Reading project was heard and the Committee voted against it unanimously—made a report of 2 printed pages against it, which report was accepted by the Senate and House unanimously. The South Reading project was then slain for the first time.

Both projects came up again the last winter. A mi nority of two of the Committee were in favor of the Malden road. It received 8 votes in the Senate, and 26 against it. The vote was not tried in the House. So the Malden project was slain for the third time.

FROM MEXICO.

BY MAGNETIC TELEGRAPH.

NEW YORK. THURSDAY. Mr Black, late American Consul at the city of Mexico had reached New Orleans, but brought no definite intelligence concerning the movements of the Mexicans in the capital, further than that the Government would leave the city, upon the approach of our forces, Cassius M. Clay, Major Borland and Gaines, remained in close confinement in the city of Mexico.

Col. Lane had published a vindication of the conduct of the Indiana regiment at the battle of Buena Vista, which appears to be satisfactory.

Gen. Scott's official despatches state the American force at the battle of Cerro Gordo, at 8500-Mexican. 12,000-3000 Mexicans taken prisoners, and 5000 stand of arms captured-23 Americans killed-wounded, 33

MINSING VESSEL. On the 5th of August last, the brig William Neilson, of Boston, Captain Weston, sailed from Honolula, Sandwich Islands, for Manila and Canon, since which nothing has been heard of her, slithough there are dates from Manila to Peb. 11. As this run is usually made in about thirty days, it is feared that about foundared in a typhon, and all on board Peristod.

The dates from the Sandwich Islands are to Dec. 26, indid if she had been located any point between the two places, it is altogether improbable that accounts should not have been received from her at one or the other.

The Hon. George Brown, of Beverly, late U. S. Commissioner to the Sandwich Islands, was passenger, with his son. Captain John Domminis, formerly a highly respectable shipmaster of Boston, but more recently unserchant of Honolulu, was also passenger. Joint Market.

THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE "ONE PRICE STORE,"

GEO. W. WARREN & CO. NVITE the attention of the public to the Foreign and Domestic Goods, ever made upon their counters. On account of the hard times and great scarcity abroad, goods have cost very low, and we are offering SHAWLS, SILKS, DRESS GOODS, and other fereign fabrics, much lower than ever before. Having more than doubled the amount of our business since the first year we opened this establishment, we are enabled to offer increased ad-vantages to all purchasers of Dry Goods at WHOLESALE OR RETAIL.

WHOLESAIR OR RETAIL.

Being desirous not only to keep all the customers we have, but to make as many more; WESMAIL USE WELL ALL WHO CALL UPON US. It is a common thing to advertise to sell lower than every one else: we only wish customers to examine for themselves. We have but one price, but that we know our own interest well enough to make as low, if not a tille lower, than can be found under any circumstances at other places. Purchasers will find at this Establishment not only the Richest & best Goods imported, But also a full and complete assortment of MEDIUM AND LOW PRICED FABRICS. OUR STOCK OF

Long & Square Shawls, IS THE LARGEST IN NEW ENGLAND, probably the largest in the United States; and we have not a dozen Cashinere Shawls in our Store, which were not imported by ourselves, which enables us to sell much lower than those who buy on this side. Almost all retailers advertise that they import these Goods, but it is not true; there is not another on the street who does so.

In Rich Dress Silks, and the best kinds of Black Silks, WE HAVE EVERY THING THAT IS NEW, CHOICE OR DESIRABLE! The value of our SHAWLS and SILKS alone, is more

at the present time, and the variety is too great for us to say more than that the purchaser of a cheap, a comfortable or a rich Shawl or Silk. can hardly fail to find something adapted to their taste in our immense assortment

In Ladies' Dress Goods, commence at a fine LONDON PRINT at Ninepence and go up through all the varieties of Ginghams, French Prints, Lawns, Muslins, Jaconets, Beilliantes, Grenadines, Mous de Lalnes, and Mohair and Tassore Plaids, &c. &c., to the richest SILK MUSLINS, BAREGES and CASHMERES imported.

In our White Department will be found a full assortment of LINEN FABRICS of ieverykind, from the Hukf, at ninepence, to the best goods a SHEETINGS, SHIRTINGS, DAMASKS, &c.

EMBROIDERIES, LACES, &c. BLEACHED AND BROWN DOMESTICS. All the different kinds of CAMBRICS, MUSLINS, &c. Housekeeping Articles,

OF EVERY DESCRIPTION A FULL ASSORTMENT. HOSIERY, GLOVES, FANCY ARTICLES, &c OUR DEPARTMENT FOR MOURNING GOODS, will be found full and complete at all seasons of the year and great care is used to ohtain desirable fabrics.

WOOLLEN GOODS. BROADCLOTES, CASSIMERES, DOESKINS, ER-MINETS, DRILLS, and many other fabrics for Boys' Wear.
In fact the most complete stock of DRY GOODS which has ever yet been dxhibited in one Establishment, and Merchants as well as purchasers at retail, will do well to examine our stock before they make their selections

CERTIFICATES.

From Dr. John C. Warren, of Boston.

Having had occasion to observe, that some persous atflicted with Hernia, having suffered much from the want of skilful workmen in accommodating Trusses to the peculiarities of their cases, I have taken pains to inform myself of the competency of Mr. J. F. Foster, to supply the deficiency occasioned by the death of Mr. Beath.—After some months of observation of his work, I am satisfied that Mr. Foster is well acquainted with the manufacture of these instruments, and ingenious in accommodating them to the variety of cases which occur. I feel myself galled upon to recommend him to my professional brethmen, and to the public, as a purson well fitted to their weats in regard to these important articles.

JOHN C. WARREN, M. D., Boston.

From Dr. Greene, Boston.

I have sent many patients to be fitted with Trusses and Abdominal Supporters, by James F. Foster, and he has unfortally given full satisfaction in their application.

The benefit of such instruments is often lost, in consequence.

The benefit of such instruments is often lost, in consequence of their imperfect construction, and from neglect in properly fitting them; on this account, I am in the habit of sending patients to Mr. Foster, confidently believing that he will give them a good article, and see that they are well fitted.

From Dr. Robbins, Roxbury.

Since the death of Mr. John Beath, I have used, in preference to all other Trusses, those made by Mr. J. F. Foster, of Boston.

P. G. ROBBINS, M. D. Boston, April 27th, 1846.

The undersigned is familiar with the ability of Mr. J. F. Foster, to unaufacture trusses of the various kinds of Supporters and other apparatus required by invalids, and fully believes that the character of his work will favora bly compare with that of other artists.

Sir: Please send us one gross of Lorraine's Pills, we have sold all we had last. They have given very good satisfaction, better than any other pills which we have in our market. I think in a short time they will take the place of others. We have had no fault found with them whatever; but, on the contraint they have been processed thinks. I think we ry, they have been praised loudly. I think we could have quite a number of highly respectable cer ificates from our citizens.

"PRAY FOR ME."

Sufferer. Pray for me friends, extreme distress-Sickness has laid me low-Objects of love and tenderness Need what I can't bestow.

Response of friends ! Yes, we will pray-Fount of supplies Ope thy exhaustless store; Ilear, hear thy servant's suppliant cries And he shall wan't no more

The Deity is supposed to answer. Suppliants, prayer its object gains Whenever rightly made. The prayer that to my ear attains Is not mere words-tongue-said!

Pray for your friends, by deeds of love My bounties you possess, Sufficient for his present wants Divide, impart and bless!

Pray for the pris'ner-for the slave By doing all you can For his relief-true brothers prove To every suffring man!

From the Knickerbocker for May. ANGEL LOVE.

Thou starry virtue, fare the well; seek Heaven. shine in glory. Beaumont and Fletcher

BY J. A. SWAN.

I could not think her spirit fled; I could not make my sweet love dead I hough oft they told me she was gone, And Twee but dust I look'd upon: one of al ke I could not make her dead.

She lay as if in dream y rest Her hands meek folded on her breast; Her lips which knew no word of guile. Half parted with a beaming smile; I could not make her dead

A pale rose gemmed her raven hair. As if it loved to blossom there: Those silken locks, that without check wined with the lilies of her neck; and think her dead.

The birds sang sweetly in their play, Beneath the casement where she lay; And then I knew she only dreamed. For every thing so life-like seemed, 1 could not make her dead.

The sun sank golden in the west, And left his last beam on her breast; And sweetly there it quivering lay, And shook her vest like the heart's quick play;

I saw she was not dead.

He tried to fright me with his speech, His solemn words, that cunning leach; That the tide of life had ceased to flow; In vain, I knew it was not so; I knew she was not dead.

Like two twin flowers upon one stem We grew, and loved, and bloomed like them; 'Twas not in Nature, then, that one Should fade, the other still live on; How could my love be dead?

They told me of a cold dark grave, And singing leaves that o'er it wave; bas Of the mottled worm would be the guest Of her I loved the dearest, best: but and I dared not think her dead; Ala in all

But when I pressed her sweet lips twain, And felt no kiss pressed back again; And in her eye no tears could see, When mine were flowing mournfully, I knew her spirit fled.

My hand stole o'er her marble breast; No gentle throb disturbed its rest: No thought lay there for me divine, As the rock heeds not the red sunshine; I knew my love was dead,

I saw it all; the purest soul That ever earth held in control, Had hushed its sweet melodious tone; I knew that I was left alone-I knew my love was dead.

Sleep came; and bathed in its smooth stream, Her spirit floated through my dream; The same sweet smile and form were there, The same pale rose wreathed in her hair: My dear love was not dead.

She whispered me of sunny lands, Where time moved not by dropping sands; Of singing birds and chanting streams; Of scenes more fair than pictured dreams, To which her spirits dear had fled.

Morn came —a tear was on my cheek; Of joy or grief, I could not speak; The dead love by my side lay shriven, The living love was blessed in Heaven; In truth she was not dead? Cambridge, 1847.

> From the Ladies' Album. BETTER MOMENTS. BY MRS. H. W. S. GROSVENOR.

Gently as falls the dew at eve. Upon the drooping flower, To give its leaves a brighter hue, So in some peaceful hour, Come better thoughts, amid the cares That dim the pathway now, Amid the shadows and the mist That hover o'er the brow.

Life, with its daily round of toil, That binds the spirit down, Or bright with pleasure's beaming smile, And vain ambition's crown; Earth, with its changing scenes of strife Its fleeting hopes and fears-These land it in no space to.

As swiftly glide our years.

Yet sometimes when the twilight steals O'er darkening hill and lea, Or midnight with its solemn brow Bends over land and sea-A spirit broods upon the air, Which calms the beating heart And bids earth's worldliness and care Forth from the soul depart.

Then pure and blessed memories Of childhood's hours are given. The artless joys of life's young morn, Its dreams of love and heaven; And the first prayer we atter then, Floats on the night-wind by, And we repeat the simple strain. With many a tear and sigh.

I've lingered long on scenes like these, 'Till bride has sunk to rest, And passion with its angry throb, Was hastied within my breast as handle A Oh! would such moments longer last, They have a soothing power, And life's dull cares but shadows seem, In calm reflection's hour Bellville, Ms.

From Fraser's Magazine. EDWARD MURRAY. The evening sun shone freely into the room where

Edward Murray sat by the bedside of his dying child.-Her sufferings had been long and severe; but now she slept calmly as an infant, one hand clasped in her father's, while her pale cheek rested on the other, half hidden by the long soft hair that floated over the pillow. God only could know the bitterness of anguish that wrong the father's heart, as he looked upon that belovshe has been my good angel: God bless her!

he felt her delinium was past. Oh! how cruelly the what seemed such to him, flowed from her tongue and wandering of her pure and innocent mind had opened lighted her smile. He could not bear to look at it, but afresh the secret sorrows of her father! It was ever of turned over a few papers that remained in the desk, her early childhood that she spokes of her first home When he lifted the last he found beneath it a small she remembered, of her long-lost mother. Often would agate box, the first gift he had ever offered to his wife, she start from her pillow, exclaiming that her mother and given by her, as he now clearly remember, to Helwas come, and mingling words of welcome and endear en, when she was a little child. He opened it, and ment with reproaches for her having delayed her coming within was a long-ringlet of dark hair. He knew whose raising her eyes to his; but I felt it was part of my pun-here suggest a mode which will prevent the rot, and

It was nearly sunset when Helen works. Her eyes rested long and sadly on her father's altered face; and, at last, drawing him towards her, she laid her head on his bosom and wept silently. 'What ails you, durling!' he said; 'you are better, surely, Yes, Yes, I am better; but I see it all. I have alnost broken your heart.' 'No, Helen, it is not you, dear child; you have the my comfort and my joy,' he exclaimed; 'you are so

'I have been delirious, I know,' said Helen, 'and have spoken of things that must have tortured you. It matters not, dear child. Do you think a day passes wherein I do not think of those things? What else has made me what I am? I have been a sad companion for you, Helen; but God knows I have loved you

It was after a long silence that Helen spoke again. 'Let me,' said she, 'once, only once more speak of her. A day may come when, in bitter sorrow, she may ask your forgiveness. Sometimes I think of her, - pale dying, broken-hearted,-praying you to say one kind word to her before she dies. Oh, father, dearest father! if that time should ever come, promise, for the sake of your child, who will then be in her cold grave, promise to forgive her!'

His voice was hourse, but he replied calmly, 'Helen, I have long since forgiven her! but I promise you by all I hold most sacred, if ever I hear of her in trouble or sorrow, I will do all she has left me the power to do, to comfort and relieve her.'
God bless you for those words' I have prived for her all my life, and now in my death, my last thoughts are for you and for her. Father, will you not pray with

He knelt down and covered his face, while his child calling up all her dying strength, poured forth a fervent prayer for the erring wife—the lost mother. To Edward Murray her voice was as the voice of an angel pleading or the fallen one in whom his heart had once delighted His frame shook with the violence of his emotion, as that young voice, strong in the energy of faith and love, breathed its last prayer, uniting once more names that had long been studered, and asking blessings on both. Helen's prayer was done; her spirit lingered a while, and then fled forevers. At midnight, when the servants ventured to enter the room, the father still held the fair young head on his bosom: but he knew she was dead, and, after he had laid her tenderly on the pillow, and kissed her cheek, he suffered them to lead him away without a murmur and set to the

His was a grief of which the world could know noth ing. None heard him complain, none saw him weep; and yet there was that in his face, betraying more grief than tears or words could have expressed. He did all that he was asked to do; but, it seemed that, if left alone, he would have mused on forever, unconscious of all that passed around him. He did not see the dead again; but he followed her to the grave, and returned with a firm step to his solitary home.

A week-two-three weeks passed away, and still Mr. Murray remained in the same stupor of unspoken grief with which he had seen his last earthly hope fade from his arms forever. He had no friends, and his servants, who had all loved poor Helen, though they pitied him, dared not speak of comfort. Once the nurse, who had tended Helen from her birth, came to beg he would rouse himself, but when he raised his calm, hopeless eyes, the words died on her lips, and she felt it could be but mockery to speak common phrases of consolation to one on whom had fullen the weight of a sorrow like

He was a man of reserved manners, and few He started, and turned hastily away; but returning soon knew the story of his life. It was whispered that a to the table on which it stood began to examine its conwife, whom he adored, had left him years before, and tents. The first thing he touched was a paper covered was -worse than dead; and it was well known that he with her own delicate hand-writing. He remembered seemed to care for nothing in the wide world, save the the day she had sat there, even where he stood now, daughter over whose infancy and youth he had watched and he had observed that she was writing unconscious with tenderness like a mother's. He had dever left ly while she conversed with him. Her own name and her even for a day; he had renounced intercourse with his were traced again and again on that paper, and he friends and relations to live only for her; and, now, pressed it passionately to his lips. Then he found a there lay his idel, dying whe knew it, he fell it, and copy of unfinished verses sweet, and full of promise, et his eyes were dry, and his hips did not tremble as breathing the fresh purity of her gifted, yet but half dehe murmured slowly, God bless her thehe is my approveloped mind. Then there were some slight sketches made in the previous summer, and among them an at-He rejoiced in her calm sleep, and yet he longed for tempted likeness of himself. He recollected the day the time when she should wake and speak to him, for she bade him sit for his picture, how wit and genius, or events; how she sat with her mother in the shadow of dreary silence. Then came back to him the dying bright moments of our early love, all the bliss of our the old lime-tree watching for him; and again her joy- words of his only child, and the solemu promise he had married life, our partings, our meetings; all Helen's ous laugh rang out as she told of his coming, and of all made her, and once again his life had an object. He looks and smiles, and sweet broken words, they all he said as he clasped them both to his bosom; she told would seek out the wife who had forsaken him, tell her came back, not to bless but to curse me. I who had how she had knelt between them to pray, and again she of that ang 1's prayer, and speak words of forgiveness been so happy, have for all these long years had nothing

But that momentary excitement passed away, and left him sunk in a stupor yet sadder than before. Time passed on, winter gave place to spring, but the change of season brought no gladness to him. His spirit seemed forever crushed, and his dull and silent life flowed on like a sluggish stream on which sunshine never fell. Helen died in the early winter, it was now late in spring .-Edward Murray was alone, musing in the long dim twiight that closed a day bright and levely to all but him when a step drew near his door and in a few moments a voman veiled and poorly clad, stood before him. He knew her at once; it was his long-lost wife. How many a time before his last grief fell upon him had he dreamed of meeting again that once beloved one till hot tears fell fast from his eyes! how many a time had he turned pale and trembled when he discovered in some stranger a fancied resemblance to her! There was a time when such a meeting as this would have stirred the deep passions of his soul, but now it seemed scarcely even to surprise him. His dull gaze was unaltered as he looked on the face once so beautiful, but now, alas, how fearfully changed!

'Go-go, Adela,' he said at last waving his hand,you are too late now; she is dead, The sound of his voice appeared to reassure her, he answered calmly as she had spoken,-I know you are desolate and she is gone, else I had pardly dared to come. I could not have borne to see my child.

'Desolate, Adela, utterly desolate!' interrupted he you said the truth. She was my only joy: she had never deceived me; no blight had fallen on her pure recall the mother's sin to cast shame on the daughter. The words stung the listener to the soul, but she replied,-

Surely it was little that such as I could injure her!' 'You forget, Adela, all that a mother should be, and you were not. God help those who have to blush for a mother, as my Helen blushed for you.

It is true, then, that she dispised me? And yet how 'Those were blessed times, Adela, said Mr Murray, when Helen was a little child, and we were young, and know not all I have suffered since those days, or you

And it was for this, Adela, that you left me, -me, who loved you as my own soul, whose prayers, whose thoughts were all yours!

'Yes,' she replied, in a tone of atter despondency, 'i was for this, and worse than this. I can look back on days, weeks, months of despair, such as you even after looking on the grave of your child, cannot conceive .-Edward I was dear to you once, say you pity me now! I do, Adela, - God knows I de. I knew the depths of your heart and the capacity for suffering, and my heart bled for you. I knew that though in your madness you fled from me, from my love, that would have sheltered you and protected you to your life's end, to him

'No, Edward, not to him-never to him! exclaimed Adela, fervently. 'Since the hour I left your roof I have never seen his face, -never, so help me God!' 'And how have you lived, Adela?' You had nothing; who has supported you?'

I have toiled for my daily bread. Sometimes I was ill, and then the charity of strangers supported me for awhile and I recovered and toiled again. It was but a scanty pittance that I could earn, but I felt it was too good for such as I. Oh! Edward,' continued Adela, in her deep, sad voice, 'there is bitter punishment for our sins, even in this world.'

'And had you no friends?' asked Mr. Murray. Not one. The poor people with whom I lodged were kind to me, and, at first seemed curious to know who and what I was; but their curiosity soon died away, and they left me alone to work and to weep as I liked.

'And this has been your life, Adela?' said Mr Murray ooking mournfully on the wan face before him, for the veil had been drawn aside, and he could see all the ha voc time had made; fifteen long weary years of sordid overty and endless labor for one cherished as you had peen, you my pride my joy, the wife of my bosom! Oh! Adela why was it thus?"

She bowed her head before him, and he continued: 'And yet even this is far better than what I feared hand was ready to help you, though I might see you no this calamity in our own county very much, during the more.

'I knew it, Edward, I knew it!' she cried, once more upon it, and again his fair wife and his rosy child seem- I for my sin, that you should think even worse of me thur ed near him, as they were when that ringlet was given I desarred. It was a dreadful life, dreadful in its uffer to Helen by her young and happy mother. For a mo-solitude, and in the thousand, thousand remembrances eloquent in addressing the vision of her fancy. Hour by ment he forgot what had since happened, and then he that crowded about me day and night. > Edward Murray's heart ached as she listened to these sorrowful words. At last he said, 'And now, Adela, where are you going? why have you come here?

'I have come here, Edward,' she replied, 'to kneel at our feet, and pray you to forgive me as you hope for forgivness hereafter. I have come far to look on you once more, but I go now to a more distant country, Forgive me Edward,' she said, earnestly, as she fell on her knees before him; for the sake of her who is an angel in heaven, forgive me, for I am dying!'

He trembled, and turned his face away to hide his emotion. She feared he rejected her petition, and that fear in a moment overpowered the strength she had summoned and she fell heavily on the floor.

In a moment he raised her, and flung aside her bonnet and veil, and was chafing her temples as her head lay on his bosom. Her long hair, now white as snow, fell round her wan face, and yet there was something that bore resemblance to the bright Helen, the young girl cut off in her early bloom. That resemblance softened Edward Murray's heart and moistened his eye. 'Adela! he said softly, 'may God forgive you even as I do!' It seemed that she heard and understood his words, for she ppened her eyes and raised them for a moment with ook of intense gratitude, that, to his dying day, Edward Murray could not forget. The eyelids sank again and all was over.

A few days later, Edward Murray again stood beside an open grave, and saw a coffin on which was inscribed an open grave, and saw a common mane, laid beside that of his only child. It was obburial service were uttered. There were many rumors affoat touching the stranger who was buried that day; but though the truth might be guessed, it was never told by him. A few days after the funeral, he gave orders for the sale of his house and furniture, and left forever the neighborhood in which, for many years, he had dwelt. It is said that the poor regretted him; but by the rich he had been little known, and was soon utterly forgotten. Those two silent graves were the only me morials he left, and they have sunk to the level of the surrounding sod.

LAZINESS .- Laziness has been the parent of all the ind you to your home; those soft lips that called you sins that have been committed since the morning of the creation. Eve was in a lazy fit at the time Satan tempted her: if Adam had kept her busy she would dola; thoughts like these drive me to madness. You have kept out of mischief and we should all have been as innocent as young lambkins. If the ante-diluvians would ply me even now. Filteen years of sorrow, of had commenced building arks when Noah preached to inguish of remorse, have brought me here, at last, to them they might all been saved; but they were too lazy kneel before you, and pray you to forgive me if you to work and so they were all drowned in the great aquacious catastrophe. The reason the Egyptians refused to let the Israelites go, was because they were too lazy to make their own bricks, and wished to compel the Hebrews to do that work for them. The conseuence was known; they were plagued greviously, and fterwards thrown into the Red Sea. Lazy people, in our days, are constantly plaguing themselves, and are an everlasting plague and eyesore to others. The sight of a creeping, listless, indolent man or woman, is misery to the thrifty and industrious.

> MATTER OF INTEREST TO FARMERS. A case was recently decided in Vermont which goes to establish this position: The purchaser of a farm has a claim on the manure made on the farm, and remaining in or about the barn at the time of sale. The case decided was that of a purchaser of a farm in Vermont against a tenant, who piled up the manure made during the winter, in the barn, and removed it before his tenancy expired. The county court gave judgment for the defendant; but the higher court reversed the judgment on the ground that manure made from the produce of a farm was appurtenant to the freehold, and must pass with it; and that the fact that the manure was piled in the barn with the intention of removing it, would not effect the plaintiff's right to the manure, unless the defendant's intention was manifested by some act calculated to put the plaintiff on inquiry .- Travel-

THE POTATOE DISEASE.

Every one who examines the subject, seems to form an opinion of his own in regard to the cause of the potatoe blight, and proposes a corresponding remedy. It is well enough to listen to all the advice afforded on the subject, and form an opinion of our own at last.-A correspondent of the Lancester Courier proposes the following mode of planting as a remedy for the difficulty: or

For some years past, the people of this country have sustained many serious losses in consequence of the rot, and been. Why did you hide yourself so utterly? My and general failure of the potatoe crops. We have felt past twelve months.

CAPTAIN FORBES.

The extreme sensitiveness of that portion of the pres who represent the feelings and defend the course of the administration in the present really unjustifiable war, as shown in the miniature earthquake they have attempted to raise, because Capt. Formes, who commanded the Jamestown, on her late trip to Cork, allowed a privato letter to be read, in which the opinion was expressed that the U. S. government showed more humanity in granting the use of the ship Jamestown to convey food to this afternoon, to John Marland, Esq., of Ballard Vale, the starving Irish, than in using extraordinary means to distress, plunder and murder their Mexican brethren, ney Castle, Ireland. The whole amount will be forbetrays, we think an evident lack of discretion on the part of those who are pledged to support the war, and an attempt to create a tempest in a teapot, which is really

It has never yet been demonstrated, we believe, that the citizens of Ireland, Scotland or England were like 1 gs of wood, incapable of exercising discretion and hidgement, and we therefore conclude that they will individuof Mr. Phillips, just as they would of the opinions of the bill-signed William Mitchell Cash'r-F. W. Mitally, judge of the opinions expressed in the private letter any other person, of the same ability; and we hardly think that intelligent British citizens will be any better convinced of the justice of the Mexican War, after all the anathemas that have been pronounced upon the nnoffending Capt. FORBES, or the distinguished champion of humanity-Hon, S. C. PHILLIPS. Besides, we presume these two gentlemen will still be suffered to walk upon their feet and to breathe the free republican atmosphere of New England, while every manifestation of bitterness towards them or any charge of treachery on the part of either of them, on account of this somewhat amusing incident, betokens we think on the part of those who exhibit such feelings, a fearful anxiety lest the conduct of the administration should undergo an examination by British, disinterested minds, and be found wanting in the requisite of even honorable warfare, and therefore they eagerly embrace every opportunity to pour out their vials of wrath on the heads of honorable and highly respectable persons, and give vent to the most extravagant expressions of holy horror at the unparallelatrocity committed by these two civizons, in accidentally revealing to an Irish audience, the private opinion of an individual. Unfortunately however, for the speculators the approval of two-thirds of the citizens of the United States, and similar and bolder sentiments have been ut- arrived. MAY TRAINING.

-no efforts having been made to muster the members of the Danvers Light Infantry-from which we conclude of the Danvers Light Infantry—from which we conclude that that company is, or will soon be disbanded. From the existing circumstances, we should think this the most prudent course to be taken. There is among us a little material for a military company, and so little is offered to those who would wish to see an efficient military corps in this town, to exert themselves in organizing and supporting such an one. In Salem, the several light companies paraded. The Light Infantry under command of Capt. GEO. H. Devereaux, with full ranks, in an entire new uniform acfantry, under command of Lieut. Wm. Saunders appeared in citizen's dress and visited Marblehead. The City Guards, a new company, composed entirely of temperance men, under command of Capt. R. H. Farrant, made their first public parade, and in the afternoon visited Ipswich. They appeared in citizen's dress, and made a very creditable display.

We understand that Rev. J. PRINCE, Pastor of the Second Universalist Society in this town, has addressed a letter to the society, requesting a dissolution of his pastoral connection.

MACADAMIZING .- The Boston Bee says it is shown in the sanatory returns of the city of St Louis, that discases of the lungs are upon the increase. One paper says that 'pulmonary consumption is rapidly increasing, This is attributed to the macadamization of the streets with limestone, the dust of which rises with the least breath of air from every part of the city, imperceptibly acts upon the lungs, and causes a disease which, it is said, was rare in the place previous to this kind of roadmaking. The Reville says, "one has to moisten the back of the hand and rub some grains of this floating pest upon it, and it will produce an ulcer."

HARD TIMES .- Nothwithstanding the fact that business is good, the price of labor is not advanced, while ness is good, the price of labor is not advanced, while produce is twenty or thirty per cent, higher than it used to be.—This advance in the prices of everything which the poor man must use, while his wages are no higher, is hard and oppressive.—Lynn News

That is true, Mr. News, but upon no one does this hurden fall heavier than upon the Printer with a large family. If he should raise the price of his paper correspondingly the cry would be, 'stop my paper.' And so in regard to advertisements. Those who are the benefitted by the advance in bread stuffs, are hardly willing to pay a reasonable advance in the price of their newspapers, but they must recollect that Printers are human bodies, and must 'eat,' as well as themselves.—N. Now for the remedy. Let that Augusta, (Geo.) FOR THE COURIER. THE LICENSE QUESTION.

Is it not time for the friends of Temperance to inquire whether they have done all that duty requires of them in his matter? As the law now is, no person whatever is ermitted to sell any quantity of spirituous liquor less han 28 gallons, for any purpose whatever, without icense first obtained. Nor can any person purchase any such quantity without participating in a violation of law. The apothecary who deals it out, under the prescription of a physician, is equally guilty of violating the law, as the seller who yields to the solicitation of the drunken rowdy. This is a state of things that demands correction. While the sober part of the community are of the opinion that spirtuous liquors are proper and necessary to e used on any occasion, and while approved physicians ontinue to recommend their use, there should be some way of obtaining these liquors in proper quantilies, without violation of law.

Is there a respectable family in the whole community hat does not in the course of the year, find occasion for the use of spirituous liquor, in some form or other? have often heard the inquiry made, but have never found such a family. If this then he so, that all must have it, there should be some proper way of coming at

We feel as sensibly the evils of intemperance as the nost ardent teetotaller can feel; we wish most heartily that these evils could be remedied; but we do not feel it to be right in avoiding one evil, to create others; certainly not, if the first can be avoided without doing this.

A BOOK FOR EVERY FARMER. OHN P. IEWETT & CO., No 28 Cornhill Boston, and 198 Essex street, Salem, have just pupilished one of the most valuable works for Farmers, ever issued from the American press, entitled, The American Vetr-from the American press, entitled, The American Vetr-rinarian, or Diseases of Domestic Animals, showing the causes, symptoms, and Remedies, and Rules for Restor-ing and Preserving Health by good management, with directions for Training and Breeding; by S. W. Cole, editor of the Agricultural Department Boston Caltivator. Mr. Cole has spent several years in compiling, and ditor of the Agricultural Department Boston Caltivator.

Mr. Cole has spent several years in compiling, and testing the facts which he now offers to the Farmers of this country. He has produced a work of great value to every man who keeps but a single Horse or Cow, but to the practical Farmer its value can hardly be over-estimated. The whole subject of the Treatment of Domestic Animals is treated in the most thereugh manner commated. The whole subject of the Treatment of Domestic Animals is treated in the most thorough manner, comprising the Horse, Ox, Cow, Sheep, Hog, Dogs, Hens, Turkeys, Geese, Birds, Bees, &c, &c. The whole is comprised into one volume of 288 closely printed pages, with 7 beautiful wood engravings, firmly bound in leather. To be sold at the low price of 50 cents, in order to bring it within the means of every man. No pains or bring it within the means of every man. THE LOST.

BY CHARLES SWAIN. The Lost! oh, what are they, the dead? Alas, there is a grave To which the many Lost have fled, we might yet would not save;

Lost time, which never more can be; Lost joy, whose sun has set; Lost friends whose tomb is Memory, Whose memory is Regret! How like a churchyard is the heart By buried relics crossed;

bas tool will

The dead are but a tithe, a part Of what the heart hath lost! The dead have an immortal power Ofer which the soul may muse; But oh, the Lost! there's not an hour-We live yet nothing lose!

Ah me! the mystery of fate, The sorrow and the thrall, The sorrow and the thrall,

How quick we learn to estimate What we can ne'er recall! Lost hope, that, like an arkless dove, Hath fled this world of care; Lost peace, lost happiness, lost love Dispersed, like things of air!

You sphere that shines from earth so far. is yet some earthly trace; How many a bright and glorious star Hath perished from its face! Oh stars of Heaven! and can ye fall? Can ye by storms be tossed ? Alas for hope! alas for all We loved, and we have lost!

E'en Nature for her woods deplores, Earth for her cities gone, Ocean for empires, and for shores O'er which her tides sweep on! Nor heaven, nor earth, nor man escapes, Nor element, nor clime: All bow before the Hand which shapes The destines of time.

From the National Era. THE ANGEL OF PATIENCE.

A FREE PARAPHRASE OF THE GERMAN. To weary hearts, the mourning homes, God's meekest Angel gently comes: No power has he to banish pain, Or gives us back our lost again.

And yet, in tenderest love, our dear And Heavenly Father sends him here.

> There's quiet in that Angel's glance, There's rest in his still countenance, He mocks no grief with idle cheer, Nor wounds with words the mourner's ear. But ills and woes he may not cure He kindly learns us to endure.

Angel of Patience! sent to calm Our feverish brow with cooling palm; To lay the storms of hope and fear, And reconcile lifes's smile and tear; The throbs of wounded pride to still, And make our own our Father's will!

Oh! thou who mournest on thy way, With longings for the close of day, He walks with thee, that Angel kind, And gently whispers, 'Be resigned! Bear up, bear on, the end shall tell The dear Lord ordereth all things well'

A Romantic Affair.

The fushionable circles of Bath have been recently on the Royal Crescent. The young lady, with whose with a basket on her arm, took her place in a third-class

Like Miss Burdett Conts, she was pestered with lovers; but had her face and form been her only dowry, she would have been deemed a noble prize, for in the provincial ton, she was universally known to be the Belle of Bath. In the various ceteries at the Pump-room, and the Assembly-rooms she was set down for a future countess at the very least and as to her forming any alliance with a plebean, that the year 1834. was altogether out of the question

It appears that some time since the young lady had occasion to order a riding-habit of a fashionable tailor of Bath, who sent one of his most experienced cutters to the royal Crescent. The tailor's emissary so well performed his task, that he not only measured the young lady, but ascertained the state of her affections. The cunning Scheneider, who was a good-looking fellow, failed not to follow up his unlooked for chance of securing a handsome wife and a splendid fortune; and, at a 'botonizing' meeting on Widecome-hill, vows were exchanged, until at length the question was 'popped,' and the gentleman accepted. A favorite attendant of the young lady was obliging enough to keep their meetings at her house a secret; and from that convenient domicile, in the dead waste and middle of Tuesday night, the hero of the shears and his lady-love proceeded, by the mixed train, to Bristol, at which city they arrived just in time to find the night train preparing to start. They applied for tickets; but alas! while the clerk was giving change for a five pound note the signal was given, and away went the train! What was to be done? They could not remain on the platform lamenting; that was certain, for an Inspector ordered her to move on. Securing a cab, the lady took up her residence for the night in one hotel, the gentleman honoring another with his patronage. The following morning, according to previous appointment, the parties met in College-green, and there concerted plans for their future proceedings. Delays were now dangerous; so they agreed to separate there, and meet at the Exeter railway terminus, Templegate, at three o'clock that day, and from thence proceed in company to Exeter, there to tie the indissoluble knot; but at lovers' plans the electric telegraph laughs. Information had been sent to Bristol of the fugitives, for the tailor had left a note on his master's desk nforming him that he had declined business, and would no further trouble him with his services, he having made an engagement with a lady. Love, however, if bandaged, sometimes contrives to have a sly peep, and the young lady, while waiting on the platform for the train, caught sight of some Bath and some Bristol policemen in plain clothes, evidently on the watch for her and her inown into a state of the utmost excitement and con- amorato. OLD ENOUGH FOR SCHOOL .- One of the most pernicious customs in society is that of sending children to school at too early an age. We hardly enter a school room without finding ample evidence that there is a great want of intelligence or humanity in parents. To get rid of trouble at home, they are willing to inflict it upon the teacher at school: to gratify their most contempgrowing cheek and pensive look send forth the keen rebuke, and plead for exercise and pure air! ACQUEDUCT VS. BLEACHERY. A question of considerable interest has been agitated in this village, the past week, between the Salem and Danvers Acqueduct Co., and the proprietors of the extensive Bleaching establishment, now in the process of building. In the judgment of these proprietors, for the convenient position of their works, it became necessary to place the walls of their buildings, directly over one or more of the ranges of logs leading from the fountain, by which the city is supplied with water. Apprehension on the part of the Company that they might sustain injury by the erection of this building, led them to apply to the S. J. Court for an injunction, to prevent their going on with the same, and for a few days the work was suspended, notwithstanding provision had been made in the construction of the building, so that the logs might be repaired or removed.

The privilege of laying the logs, for several rods through this land, was originally granted to the Acqueduct Co. for the merely nominal sum of one dollar! The logs might have been removed so that the building could not interfere with them, at an expense not exceeding a weekly prayer meeting has been held by the religious $75 00, and we understand that the former proprietor of members of Congress every Saturday evening, for a series ed, to remove the logs at his own expense, but was tefused the privilege. PHE SEASON.

Almost daily we hear some remark upon the backwardness of the Season. It would seem from the facts published by Gen. Dearborn, that have come within his own observation, since 1835, a period of twelve years, in relation to the blooming of the Cherry Tree, that this so son is not more than one weeks butted during that period. He speaks of April 22, being the earliest time of blooming, and May 17, the latest; -and about May 5, the average time of the commencemen of the bloom. The present year Cherry Tress were neticed in bloom as early as the 12th of May, and on the 25th the blossoms had generally fallen from the trees.-We learn from the farmers in this vicinity, that the blooms upon the apple trees is not large; and less upon the Baldwin, than most other fruits. We notice this particularly, Because it seems to be more generally cultivated at the present time, than any other species of apple; and because it is in fact, all its properties considered, the most worthy of the cultivation.

On Monday last, the wife of Mr. FRANCIS RHELPS, of this town, while riding along Lowell street, with a horse and chaise, attempted to pass between two ox-teams, which had, with the gressest carelessness been left by their drivers, standing in such a position as nearly to obstruct the passing. The horse finding himself thus wedged in, became frightened and unmanageable, and in dashing forward struck a post, which thraw Mrs. Phelps from the chaise, though fortunately, but slightly injuring her. At the same the force of the blow severed both the shafts from the body of the chaise and disengaged the horse, who taking advantage of this liberty, rushed with furious speed through the street, towards. Allen's Building, and was enabled to "let off steam" only by bringing his hind feet against the basement stones of that building, while his nose and head protruded through one of the windows of the shop of by A. > Whether it shall grant a man a right to violate right?—
> The slave muster contends that he has a right to bold his fellow beings in bondage in the new lands, and the person so held, claims the right to be set at liberty, and to become his own master; and Congress is called upon to become his own master; and Congress is called upon to arbitrate between them. Now with any well constituted and unprejudiced mind, the question does not admit of a moment's hesitation. The government has a right to violate right?—

constitutional contest extends to me naw territories, and which you cannot show a valid title, the true owner shall have his property restored to him. There can be no reasonable objection to such a decision.

It alleged also, that if new states apply for admission into the Union, with a republican constitution of government, the Congress has no right to enquire whether slavery is allowed in them or not. Just as if a form of government, the principles of which permitted one man to hold another in donestic servitude, were strictly related to the contest of intoxication as far as possible. No one can for a moment doubt, that intoxication or drunkenness is an evil and an offence. But while the articles that cause is not permitted to exist, these evils will more or less prevail.

The question still recurs, what are the regulations that the "public good" demands in relation to the sale and use of intoxicating liquors? We will not presume to much the state that they whold have any that publican, a constitution may be ever so excellent in say what they should be;—we will not only say that, many respects, but so far as it allows of slavery, it has an anti-republican element. The Congress and that this improvement is dependent upon the united has a right to demand of every state that shes for admission into the Union, that its form of government be republican in all respects, or at least that there shall be no puonean in an respects, of at least that there shan be no we mean those who have proved their faith by their States, in those provisions which lend a sanction to African servitude, presents an exception to the general principles on which it is founded. It is to some extent a compromise, and was understood to be such at the time it was framed. Now the whole spirit of American free dom, the express objects for which Independence was general principles of the constitution itself, forbid that the compromise should be extended at all be-yond its original design.

We are told, however, of the conservative influence which slavery exerts on our political institutions; it is held forth as a remedial agent in our system, for disorit of no other cure. It has even been deninated the corner stone of American freedom. The idea seems to be, that as the laboring portion in every community, must form a range, cious populace, disqualified to properly exercise the rights of chizenship, whose passions are inflammable, rights of chizenship, whose passions are inflammable. converted into slaves, to destroy their power of doir mischief, And so if the African race in any instance should not happen to furnish a supply for the purpose, the principle would demand that one portion of the whites should be subjected to the other. Now this is giving up republicanism; it is a confession of the atter impracticability of free institutions; it is surrendering the great doctrines of our revolutionary contest, and going back to the days of vassalage and barbarianism. If our back to the days of vassalage and barbarianism. If our free system cannot be sustained except on the basis of slavery, then it is not worthy of the name; it is an outrage on all propriety to call it republican, and it could be as truly denominated a despotism as any which ever trod human necks into the dust. But there is no necessity for the ignorance and degradation of the laboring classes. If paper many we need to extend convert in was exhibited in benaif of the various reformatory movements far exceeding any similar occasion.

Mr. Cole has spent severel years in compiling, and testing the facts which he now offers to the Furners of this country. He has produced a work of great value to every man who keeps but a single Borse or Cow, but to the practical Farmer its value cans hardly be over-estimated. The whole subject of the Treatment of Donestic Animals is treated in the most thorough manner, comprising the Horse, Ox, Cow, Sheep, Hog, Dogs, Hons, Turkeys, Geese, Birds, Bees, &c, &c. The whole is comprised into one volume of 288 closely printed puges, with 7 beautiful wood engravings, firmly bound in leather. To be sold at the low price of 50 cents, in order to bring it within the means of every man. No pains or expense, have been spared on the purt of the author or the publishers to produce a work worthy a place in every Farmer's Library.

CHILDHOOD. Sister, arise! the sun shines bright, The bee is humming in the air. The stream is singing in the light, The May buds never looked more fair.

Blue is the sky, no rain to-day; Get up-it has been light for hours. And we have not begun to play, Nor have we gathered any flowers. for Time, who looked on, each accent caught. And said, 'He is too young for thought.'

med Ceres YOUTH. To-night, beside the garden gate ? of second, what a while the night is coming! I never saw the sun so late. Nor heard the bee at this time humming: I thought the flowers an hour ago Had closed their bells and sunk to rest; How slowly flies that hooded crow! How light it is along the west! Said Time, 'He yet hath to be taught That I oft move too quick for thought.'

What thoughts would'st thou in me awaken Nor love! for that brings only tears: Nor friendship! No, I was forsaken! Pleasure I have not known for years; The future I would not foresee, I know too much from what is past: No happiness is there for me, And troubles ever come too fast. Said Time, 'No comfort have I brought, The past to him's one painful thought.'

Said time, 'The change is in thy thought.'

mond sher 0 BY W. C. BRYANT. Dost thou idly ask to hear At what gentle seasons

Nymphs relent, when lovers near Press the tenderest passions?

Ah! they give their faith too oft To the careless wooer; Maidens' hearts are always soft— Would that men's were truer!

Woo the fair one, when around Early birds are singing; When o'er all the fragrant ground,
Early herbs are springing; When the brookside, bank and grove, All with blossoms laden, Shine of beauty, breathe of love-

Woo her when, with rosy blush, Summer's eve is sinking; When on rills that softly gush, Stars are softly winking; When, the boughs that knit the bower, Moonlight gleams are stealing; Woo her, till the gentle hour Wakes a gentler feeling.

Woo the timid maiden.

Woo her when autumnal dyes Tinged the woody mountain, When the drooping foliage lies - 1 d to lin the half choked fountain: By the seene, that tells how fast Youth is passing over, Warn her, ere her bloom is past, To secure her lover.

Woo her when the North winds call Wi en within the cheerful hall,

While the wintry tempest round Sweeps the landscape hoary, Sweeter in the ear shall sound Love's delightful story.

[From the Christian Watchman] THE NEW HOME

Hum! ha! so you are engaged!' said a thick-set, jovial-looking man, with a roguish twinkle in his eye, as morning. 'Going to marry Charlotte Staughton, eh!' and he set his cane rather heavily on the floor.

The young man whom he addressed, an active, intelligent mechanic, blushed, turned half round and stammered, 'Why, yes sir, I' What does a poor fellow like you want of a woman that has studied geography, geometry, geology and physiology, and nobody knows what besides? There's Sally Sampson-, But uncle Charlotte is something better that a genteel trifler with books. She is a thorough scholar: her mind is well-disciplined; her information is extensive and valuable. 'Pshaw! a lover's nonsense! There's Sally Sampson, she's somebody. She can spin and weave, wash and iron, bake and brew; she'll be a help to a man.' 'Yes, uncle, but a man wants something besides dollars and cents. He wants pleasant conversation.' 'Crazed! clearly crazed!' said the elderly gentleman way,-fairly thrown away. They will be unfailing sources of refined happiness, both to herself and friends and I mistake her much, if she will sigh for an opportunity to cast her jewels to the crowd, to be gathered or trampled upon according to the moment's whim. Oh! no, no, indeed! but then-but then.

But then my dear Susie, your views, and the views of your fashionable friends, are exceedingly contracted upon the subject of labor, and forgive me, if I add, no a little irreligious. This particular case, however, appeals so strongly to your prejudices, that I cannot hope to benefit you much by reasoning, or illustration. We will talk about it again, in Charlotte's parlor.'

Yet even I could but admit a few cowardly fears.

'They have been educated so differently,' I said. 'Char-jotte has been accustomed to such entire freedom! How can she be true both to herself and ausband? How can she struggle for perfection, render her house attractive, and at the same time, make too frequent demands upon resources which must long continue slender?' I forgot for the moment, how blessed a thing it is quietly to gather the good and the beautiful about the spot, whatever and wherever it may be that the below ed calls home; to hedge it in, and surround it with the barriers which the discord and tumult of the world cannot penetrate; to create an atmosphere of tranquilty and he walked into his nephew's show, one fine spring peace, unruffled by a breath of discontent or ambition. I forget how, in this beautiful work, the heart expands, hour by hour; how the exercise of patience, and forbearance, and thoughtful kindness purifics and elevates: how healthful activity sends the blood in its quickened flow to redden the lips, and mantle upon the cheek; how, in fact, the faithful discharges of home duties communicates an intense vitalty, increasing the will, and doubling the power for action. I forgo how insignificant are the mere triumphs of society, the appliance of the crowded drawing-room, the graceful, but heartless homage offered not to worth, but to talent and to fashion. It was for a moment only. A sweet vision of domestic life, rich beyond measure in heart treasures was before me, and I feared no longer.

At the risk of seeming intrusive I called on the married pair, the very evening after their return from a trip to Cape May. There house was a small, old fashioned stone building, far back from the road and nestling beneath the tall drooping elms, which vied with each oth-'There's no hope! now Nevy! 'It does in this case at least,' and with a glow of proud pleasure he ushered me into a little parlor, which, in my delight, I really believed the prettiest one in the world. There are many individuals in our community who labor under the erroneous conviction, that the liberal provision which has been made for the free education of children in this commonwealth, is in advance of all the other states in the union, and that a greater expenditure has been incurred by the citizens of this state for the support of schools and the advancement of education among us, than has been borne by citizens of any other state. Of course such superior advantages to obtain a liberal education, cannot be afforded by our own town, where the amount of taxable property is but a moiety, compared with the city of New York, still it is a matter, deserving the serious consideration of our citizens, whether they will consent to an increase of taxation sufficient to provide for the necessary expense of giving more general instruction in the higher branches of an English and classical education, and granting to those pupils who inend pursuing these studies, and who usually are compelled to resort to academies in the neighboring towns, the privilege of gratifying their desire at home as well as to those whose limited means will not enable them to avail themselves of the advantages of an education which would require any considerable expense.

THE PIGMY AND THE GIANT.

It was our fortune on Saturday last, to take passage from New York, in the splendid new Steamer BAY STATE, which is one of the new line to Boston via Fall River. Soon after being on board, we discovered hat we had among our fellow travellers two distinguished individuals, representing the two extremes of humanity-the largest man and the smallest one in the country-DANIEL WEBSTER and General TOM THUMB!

Thumb has been rewarded with the most money. He nides in his splendid carriage with coachman and footman in livery, his tiny fingers sparkling with diamonds, the gifts of queens and countesses, while Webster appears in the plain garb of a common citizen. The little man has been the toy and pet of the Sovereigns of the old world, while the great one is looked upon with admiration by the sovereign people of the new. The very diminutiveness of Thumb has made his fortune in the world, just as the smallest men in political are sometimes raised to high offices from the merit of their former obscurity, while the truly great are left to adorn a private station. In the case of the personages before us, the great man is doubtless better fitted for the presidential chair, but the smaller one, by virtue of his military title -will be most likely to reach it.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, June 1, 1847. I am now domiciled and domesticated at this celebrat-to this place, and an additional train by each of those outes is soon to be added to accommodate the increasing travel in the approaching busy season of the year. Saratoga Village is a beautiful place, regularly laid out and embeltished with many fine private mansions and noble public houses, designed to accommodate the visiters who throng here in the summer season. Some of hese houses are superbly fitted up, and have extensive gardens and pleasure grounds attached to them, affording delightful retreats for their temporary residents.-Union Hall, the house where I am sojourning, is one of the first class houses and is celebrated for its good attendance and the quist and order with which it is conducted. It is a pleasant little cottage, three stories high, and will accomodate a family of 400 persons, besides about 70 attendants The principal street in the place is called Broadway, on which most of the large public houses are situated.-It is a wide street, as its name indicates, and has brick sidewalks of ample width, lined with lofty trees and affording a fine promenade. On one side, outside the sidewalk, between it and the travelled srieet, there is a green lawn, enclosed by posts and chains which adds much to the beauty of this principal avenue. It was not my design however to describe to you the place but to give you some account of the famous water, which draws so many here annually, from every part of the country. I was surprised to find that there were so many mineral springs in the place, and that the waters were so entirely distinct in taste and quality, as well as in their mineral effects. and mental powers. He often exclaims "It is great water-there is no mistake, it is great water, I tell you Sir, it is GREAT Water." And so it is. If you doubt, drink of it. If you will not do this, come and sit with me, any morning from 5 to 6 o'clock, by the Congress Spring and see the throng of people who ome to drink of its water, and to carry it away. See them with their tin pails, their mugs and pitchers of all maginable sizes and shapes, go to the Spring and carry home its precious water. Old and young, men and women, boys and girls, white and black, the polished gentleman in his morning slippers, and the servant who polishes his boots;—the casual visitor and the oldest resident, all, all wind their way to the spring and they are oming and going, going and coming, until you wonder where all this great population came from, as the village seems quite too small to hold them. Witness too, the great numbers who flock here at the fashionable season of the year, (which has not yet commenced,) to drink of and bathe in these waters. The population in six weeks from this time will be trebled, and every nook and corner of the village will be crowded. Some, it is true come as votaries of fashion but most for the cheering effect of the waters of the Springs. You may say that the benefit derived is caused by the journey, the absence of care and change of scene, and not from the waters. These may have their influence but after all my word for it you will feel all the better for the water. I dont know how lasting its effect may be, but at the time of residing here it is glorious!

"It is truly Great Water." I have said that this is not the business, or visiting eason, but travellers are beginning to arrive and preparations are making for them. At present only half lozen of the 100 boarding houses are open, and the town is comparatively empty. How then must it be in July and August? It proves the popularity of the waters, that they are so generally used by the residents of the place, who now compose most of the company that thron g to the springs in the morning and during the day. I am informed that many of the residents here, are those who came to afford their families the benefit of the mineral waters. The time of visitors is passed in various ways, in reading, walking, bathing and promenading he platforms under the spacious verandahs, supported on large and lofty columns, with which all the large establishments are provided. There are also bowling alleys and shooting galleries for those who like to practise such recreations, and a circular Radway, in a beautiful grove, on a hill near the Congress Spring. In the fashionable season they have also music, balls, concerts and dramatic entertainments. To those who wish for the benefit of the waters merely, this is a most favorable time to visit the Springs. You will have the benefit of agreeable company and every thing but the excitement of the fashionable throng of the later season. You may rise early in the morning and go down to the spring and await your turn for the three tumblers, placed in tin sockets, which the boy in attendance has just plunged into the 12 inch aperture, and which come up dripping with the cold sparkling water. As the water is rather cold, you will probably be content with drinking off the three tumblers and conclude to take more at your boarding house, where a quantity has just been carried by the servant. Some, however prefer to drink their nine or ten tumblers at the Spring. It is a singular quality of the water that you may drink thrice the quantity of it that you can of common water and not experience any sensation of fullness. In an hour or two you will be summened by the boll to breakfust, which you eat with unwonted relish and feel disposed to take a walk about town or over the pleasant grounds in the vicinity, perhaps extending it to the rural Cemetery where may be seen the splendid marble monument. erected to Colman, the inventor of the Eolian attachment to the piano. CERTIFICATES.

From Dr. John C. Warren, of Boston, Having had occasion to observe, that some persons afficted with Hernia, having suffered much from the want of skilful workmen in accommodating Trusses to the peculiarities of their cases, I have taken pains to inform myself of the competency of Mr. J. F. Foster, to supply the deficiency occasioned by the death of Mr. Beath.—
After some raouths of observation of his work, I am satisfied that Mr. Foster is well acquainted with the manufacture of these instruments, and ingentous in accommodative tests where the supplies that the supplies the su self called upon to recommend him to my professional brethren, and to the public, as a person well fitted to their wants in regard to these important articles.

JOHN C. WARREN, M. D., Boston.

From Dr. Greene, Boston.

I have sent many patients to be fitted with Trusses and Abdominal Supporters, by James F. Foster, and he has unformly given full satisfaction in tueir application.

The benefit of such instruments is often lost, in consequence of their imperfect construction, and from neglect in properly fitting them; on this account, I am in the hab-it of sending patients to Mr. Foster, confidently believing well fitted.

A hacking cough constantly annoyed me!

Boston, Mass.,
June 1st; 1844

Sir,—In February last, I took a sudden cold, after which a hacking cough constantly annoyed me, and this, combined with my other maladies, rendered me truly miserable, as everybody told me that I was in a consumption. Since, I have taken Lorraine's Pills an now every body tells me that I am well;—I fee as well as ever I did.

J. E. S. McKEY.

Portland, Me., Nov., 7th, 1843
Sir: Please send us one gross of Lorraine's Pills, we have sold all we had last. They have given very support to the every beautiful to the country of the five last and best observations of the decrements of life, according to the experience of the oldest of the English Companies. It is the man has been thus far remarkably successful.

Since comminencing, February 1st, 1844, to April 1st, 1846.

The amonuis from 200 to $10,000 each.
Net fund accumulated (owing to the favorable turn of risks thus far) $89,500 besides guarantée capital.

good satisfaction, better than any other pills which we have in our market. I think in a short time they will take the place of others. We have had no fault found with them whatever; but, on the contra ry, they have been praised loudly. I think we could have quite a number of highly respectable cer ificates from our citizens. Respectfully yours,

E. MASON:

Chelsea. Jan- 3d, 1844 Sir I transmit to you an account of my case for publication, believing it to be my duty. I have been confined with the Rheumatism nearly the whole winter. have had some of the best physicians of Boston and could get nothing that would relieve me more han temporarily. I heard of the wonderful virtues of Lorraine's Pills, I nad no faith whatever, but 1 took them, and it is a soleme fact that when I had taken but eight pills! my Rheumatism had entirely left me, and I have remained well ever since. N. B. I never took more than one pill at a time ind that on going to bed.

oing to bed.
Yours respectfully,
W. M. HALSTAL

W. M. HALSTAL

Inable to raise the Hands to the Head!

Sir—For three years, Scrofula had produced such effect upon my constitution, that I was unable to raise my hand; the bones were in different places destroyed by ulcertion, and I feared it might reach the brain or vital organs. My pains were violent—all medicines recommended did no good. At last, I tried LORRAINE'S VEGETABLE PILLS, which gave mmediate relief, and have entirely cured me.

Respecifully, your ob't serv't,

JAMES CODSON, Esq.

Sir; I have sold all the pills I last had of you please send another lot immediately. The sale o Lorraine's vegetable Pills is rapidly on the increase they are becoming very popular. I sell more and more every day. As a curative medicines and purifier of the blood, I think they stand unrivalled. One fact I have noticed, that no one that has used them fact I have noticed, that no one that has used them finds any fault with them; they have wrought some very great cures. One lady, who has been confined to the house and bed, a great part of the time, for twenty years, is now cured and able to work most of the time, after having taken 3 boxes only of Lor raine's Pills!! I might name many other cases where the cures have been as great, but have not

Sally said nothing. A few glasses a-day and tobacco she knew, must cost something, though, like her husband, she did not believe it would make the difference of buying a quarter of an acre of ground, and building a snug cottage in the course of a few years.

Let us see how this is. Perhaps we can find out the leak that wasted the substance of Ralph Lyon. He never drank less than three glasses a day, and sometimes four; and his tobacco cost, for smoking and chewing, just twelve and a half cents a week. Now how much

In about the same ratio that the external condition of Thomas Jones improved, did that of Ralph Lyon grow worse and worse. From not being able to save anything he gradually began to fall in debt. When quarter-day came round, there was generally several dollars wanting to make up the rent; and their landlord, with much grumbling on his part, was compelled to wait for the balance some two or three weeks beyond the due-day. At length the quarter-day found Ralph with nothing When Sally Lester gave her hand in marriage to laid by for his rent. Somehow or other, he was not able to earn as much, from sickness, and days lost from Poor Mrs. Lyon felt very miserable at the aspect of things; more especially, as in addition to the money squandered at the ale-house by her husband; he often came home intoxicated. The grief to her was more severe, from the fact that she loved Ralph tenderly, notwithstanding his errors. When he came home in liquor she did not chide him, nor did she say any thing to him to get ahead as some others did, notwithstanding Sally about it when he was sober; for then he appeared so ashamed and put down, that she could not find it in her heart to utter a single word.

One day she was alarmed by a message from Rulph that he had been arrested, while at his work, for debt, by his landlord, who was going to throw him in jail. They now owed him over twenty dollars. The idea of to his cottage, said Ralph one day to Sally, and says her husband being thrown into a fail was terrible to poor her children for her, and then putting on her bonnet, she almost flew to the magistrate's office. There was an nere. He is going to put it all in garden this spring, Rulph, with an officer by his side ready to remove him

'You shan't take my husband to jail,' she said, wildly when she saw the real aspect of things, chinging fast hold of Ralph. 'Nobody shall take him to jail.'

'I am sorry, my good woman,' said the magistrate, 'to do so, but it can't be helped. The debt must be paid. or your husband will have to go to jail. I have no discretion in the matter. Can you find means to pay the debt? If not, perhaps you had better go and see you landlord; you may prevail on him to wait a little longer for his money, and not send your husband to juil.'

Yes, Sally, do go and see him, said Ralph; 'I am sure he will relent when he sees you. Mrs. Lyon let go the arm of her husband, and, durt-

But it availed nothing. The man was in a charmed circle, and every impulse tended to throw him into the centre where ruin awaited him.

At last even a few dollars she had received every week from her husband's earnings, ceased to come into her hands. Still, there had been no unkind word, not even a remonstance from the much-enduring wife.

Matters at last reached a climax. Poor Mrs. Lyon had not been able to get any thing to do for a week, and all supplies of food, except a little meal were exhausted. An anxious day had closed, and at night-fall the mother made some hasty pudding for the children, which was eaten with a little milk. This consumed her entire store She had four children, the two oldest she but to bed, but kept the two youngest, one five years old, and the other three, up with her. 'If it is pleasant to you, it shall be so to me. And where that my husband goes, surely I can go. God hath oined us together as one and nothing should divide us." By this time the three glasses of brandy that Mrs Ly. on had called for were placed before her on the table.

Bring another glass, said Mrs Lyon calmly, 'my husband will drink with us. 'Sally, are you mad?' ejaculated Ralph.

'Mad, to go with my husband? Why should you ask that, Ralph? Drink, children,' she added, turning to her two little ones, and placing a glass of unadulturated brandy before them. 'It will do you good.' As Sally teen; the balance of the required sum she borrowed said this, she lifted her own glass to her lips.

Surely, you are not going to drink that said Ralph. Why not? You drink to forget sorrow; and if brandy have that effect, I am sure no living creature needs it more than I do. Besides, I have eaten nothing to-day, and need something to strengthen me.'

Saying this, she sipped the burning liquid, and smacking her lips, looked up in her husband's face and smiled-'It warms to the very heart, Ralph!' she said. 'I feel better already.' Then turning to the children, whose ncrease their income. All that he brought home each day glasses remained untouched before them, she said to the astonished little ones,

'Drink, my children! It is very good.' Woman! are you mad! My children shall not touch it;' and he lifted the glasses from the table and handed them to one of the company that had crowded around to witness this strange scene.

Why not?' said his wife, in the calm tone with which she had at first spoken. If it is good for you, it is good for your wife and children. It will put these dear ones to sleep, and they will forget that they are cold and hungry. To you it is fire and food and bed withhold them from us.'

By this time Ralph was less under the influence of liquor than he had been for weeks, although he had drank as freely as ever through the day. Taking hold mer and dimmer before the eyes of the much enduring of his wife's arm, he said, in a kind voice, for he began to think that her mind was really wandering-

'Come Sally, let us go home.'

Why should we go, Ralph?' she replied keeping her seat. There is no fire at home, but it is warm and comfortable here. There is no food there, but here is plenty to eat and drink. I don't wonder that you liked this place better than home, and I am sure I would rather stay here.'

The drunken husband was confounded. He knew not what to do or to say. The words of his wife smote him to the heart; for she uttered a stunning rebuke that could not be gainsaye!. He felt a choking sensation, and Sally,' he said, after a pause, in an altered and very

Here, once and forever, I solemnly pledge myself before God never again to drink the poison that has made me more than half a brute, and beggared my poor fan.ily. Come, Sally! Let us hurry away from here; the very air oppresses me. Come, in Heaven's name! come!'

Quickly as an electric shock had startled her, did Mr Lyon spring from her seat, as her husband uttered the last word, and lay hold of his arm with an eager grasp. On Tuesday evening the case was further discussed until a late hour, when the amend-12 navs.

Many of the citizens of Salem, were dissatisfied with this decision of the City government, and we see in the Town Meeting, which is issued by order of the Mayor and Aldermon-

A request for a meeting of the citizens, signed by more than thirty qualified voters, having been presented to the Mayor and Aldermen, notice is hereby given that in compliance with the provision of the City Charter meetings of the legal Voters of the City of Salem, will be held in the several Wards of said City, on Tuesday, the 22tf inst., for the purpose of giving their votes, year or nay, upon the construction of a Bridge from Union Wharf to Stage Point, so called.

There has been or is about to be, we understand, an effort made to obtain a bridge, to connect the Paradise road in Salem, with Federal street. In passing that way a few days since, we were strongly impressed with the necessity which exists for the construction of such a bridge, not only for the accommodation of the rapidly increasing population, on the North side of the river. but also for the convenience of the numerous visiters to the Harmony Grove Cemetery, and more especially that there may be some way by which a funeral procession can approach the cemetery without crossing the track of the Essex Railroad, which now passes over the only two avenues leading to it from the city of Salem. We have no doubt that this project will meet with better success than the one which has recently been defeated in the Common Ceuncil of Salem, as the whole city would be accommodated and benefitted by it.

PHILANTHROPY. - The following facts, condensed from authentic sources, may surprise some heretofore unaccustomed to mark the silent movements of Christian unaccustomed to mark the silent movements of Christian philanthrophy. Though less than half a century, since the era of modern anssionary efforts began, it is estimated that there have in this period been furnished to heathen nations some two thousand missioneries from various protestant countries, beside several thousand trained native preachers and teachers. As results, upwards of two hundred thousand have become members of Christian churches, and much greater numbers brought under the influence of religious schools; while in the same period, the Bible and religious tracts and volumes have been very extensively distributed in upwards of a hundred different languages; thus waking up the spirit of enquirery among many millions. In connection with these missionary labors, the moral condition and wants of the world have been fully developed; the interest of spience, commerce, and social intercourse throughout science, commerce, and social intercourse throughout the human family, eminently promoted, civil liberty extended, and the way was opened for the general diffusion of knowledge and piety.

THE RIO FRIO PASS .- This pass will now become the great point of interest, as it is evident our Mexican enemy intend to make a stand there, and that we shall have another severe battle. It is described as much more formidable than that of Cerro Gordo. It goes through the mountain with a steep ascent, and for nearly three miles the road with high and rugged sides is only sufficient to admit the passage of a single manufacture and have for sale, the celebrated only sufficient to admit the passage of a single wagon at ed a time. CERTIFICATES.

From Dr. John C. Warren, of Boston, Having had occasion to observe, that some persons afficted with Hernia, having suffered much from the want of skilful workmen in accommodating Trusses to the permitted of their cases, I have taken pains to inform myself of the competency of Mr. J. F. Foster, to supply the deficiency occasioned by the death of Mr. Beath.—After some months of observation of his work, I am satisfied that Mr. Foster is well acquainted with the manufacture of these instruments, and ingenious in accommodating them to the variety of cases which occur. I feel myself called upon to recommend him to my professional. self called upon to recommend him to my professional brethren, and to the public, as a person well fitted to their wants in regard and to these important articles.

JOHN C. WARREN, M. D., Boston.

From Dr. Greene, Boston.

I have sent many patients to be fitted with Trusses and Abdoninal Supporters, by James F. Foster, and he has unformly given full satisfaction in their application.

The benefit of such instruments is often lost, in consecutor of the principle. quence of their imperfect construction, and from neglect in properly fitting them; on this account, I am in the habit of sending patients to Mr. Foster, confidently believing that ho will give them a good article, and see that they are well fitted.

H. B. C. GREENE, M. D. From Dr. Robbins, Roxbury.

Since the death of Mr. John Boath, I have used, in preference to all other Trusses those made by Mr. J. Foster, of Boston.

On board ship De'hi, on the passage from Boston to to Calcuita, Mr. Aveustus E. Daniels, of this town, aged 21, son of Mr David Daniels, Esq.

Mr. Daniels was induced to undertake the voyage for the benefit of his health, which had been for some time, in an uncertain state. He had sought the advice of eminent physicians, and they had united in the opinion that a voyage to Calcuita would be beneficial, and probably restore him to sound health, but it had the contrary effect. The sea air did not improve his health. He remained about the same for a few weeks after leaving Boston, but the influence of the warm weather, which he canfidently anticipated would prove salutary, tended to produce languor and feebleness, and he gradually grew weaker and died on the 13th of March last, about three months after leaving home.

I have sent many patients to be fitted with Trusses and Abdominal Supporters, hy James F. Foster, and he has unformly given full satisfaction in tneir application.

The ben fit of such instruments is often lost, in consequence of their imperfect construction, and from neglect in properly fitting them; on this account, I am in the habit of sending patients to Mr. Foster, confidently believing that he will give them a good article, and see that they are well fitted.

From Dr. Rabbins, Rozbury.

Since the death of Mr. John Beath, I have used, in preference to all other Trusses those made by Mr. J. F. Foster, of Boston.

[From Graham's Magazine.] THE PLACE WHERE FLOWERS ARE MADE.

BY C. W. B. Far away in the isle of a southern sea, Where the wavelets play like childhood free; Where the skies are bending in laughteur o'er The waving green of that happy shore;

Where the finest things in the world that be Are flitting and swinging from spray to tree; And music chiming, like silver bells, In the dew-drop arch, of gladness tells;

There rises a palace, with glittering dome, And this bright place is the faries' home; ... And there in my dreams one night I flew-Oh! a brighter dream I never knew.

Aye, fairer than flush of the morning sky, When sun-rays are lingering in beauty nigh, Was the pearly hall of that blessed place, And the gleam I caught of each happy face.

They were weaving flowers, in love and song, For a weary world, a world of wrong; Each sat at her loom, while a bent sunbeam, For her shuttle flew like a lightning gleam.

One wove the nzure with yellow gold, Round the violet's eve the robe to fold: Then hung it with leaves of velvet green. A drapery fit for a flower I ween.

One caught the fleece of a cloud of snow And soun its threads with the sunset glow: Then roses were born, the bright, the faint. Then blush, the pure, without a taint.

One gathered the chains from the moon that fell, And the silver star-beams they loved so well; Then bevies of blossoms, in radiant white. Sprang from the loom with love and light.

One stole the web of shadow-lace, Where the moon had hidden her smiling face, While her witching glance was peering through, As you've sometimes known a coquette to do.

Of this a saddened flower they made, And it fell from the loom a pale night shade; With a thought for the gloom, a thought for the gay Stamped on its leaves by a weeping fay.

One rent the veil the angels hold, And caught a thread of "purple and gold," We weave with a skein of tangled light, And that flower-woof was passing bright.

One linked the dew from the fountain's lip With the darkling shade where willows dip, And tribes of flowers that love the spray, Were born at a touch of the bright-eyed fay.

But flowers must fude, and so must dreams, And mine had fled with the pale moon beams; Yet the memory o'er my heart is laid, Of the fairy palace where flowers are made.

> THE TILLER OF THE SOIL. BY DAVID L. ROATH.

A hardy, sun-burnt man was he, A hardy sun-burnt man; No stardier man you'll ever see. Though all the world you scan. In summer's heat, in winter's cold, You'll find him at his toil-Oh, far above the knights of old, Is the Tiller of the Soil.

No weighty bars secure his doer, No ditch is dug around; His walls no cannon bristle o'er, No dead lie on the ground. A penceful laborer is he, Unknown in earth's turmoil-From many crushing sorrows free, Is the tiller of the soil.

His stacks are seen on every side, His barns are filled with grain: Though others hail not Fortune's tide, He labors not in vain. The land gives up its rich increase, The sweet reward of toil;

And blest with happiness and peace,

Is the tiller of the soil,

He trudges out at break of day, And takes his way along, And as he turns the yielding clay, He sings a joyful song. .He is no dull unhappy wight, Bound in misfortune's coil; The smile is bright, the heart is light,

Of the tiller of the soil. And when the orb of day has crown'd With gold the Western sky, Before his dwelling he is found, With cheerful faces by-With little laughing duplicates, Caressess will not spoil! Oh! joy at every side awaits,

A hardy, sun-burnt man is he, A hardy sun-burnt man, But who can boast a hard so free, As he the tiller can? Nor summer's heat, nor winter's cold, The pow'r has him to foil-Oh, far above the knights of old,

The tiller of the soil.

Is the tiller of the soil.

One of the strongest peculiarities-indeed, I may say passions, of the Irish, is their devoted fondness their offspring.

From the Genesee Farmer.

GOOD BUTTER. 'Is your butter good?' said I to a farmer. 'Good! my wife has made butter these twenty years, and I should think she ought to know how to make good butter by this time!'

He was evidently offended. 'Well, let us examine it.' The cover was taken off the tub; the clean white cloth (which had been wet in brine) rolled up, and the yellow treasure revealed. It certainly did look good. 'It tastes sweet but how very salt it is.'

'We have always made our butter salt to have it keep at this season.' 'Let us see if the buttermilk is as well worked out as the salt is in.' Some of the rolls were pressed down with the ladle. Now, my friend, if your wife has made butter these twenty years, she does not know how to make it good; for no butter can be good until the buttermilk is worked out. If that is done you need not salt it so much to would have made this butter excellent but lacking that little, it is only a second quality, as you shall acknowledge when I show you a sample of good butter.' We went in, and I took up a roll from a crock of first rate butter. It was smooth, clear and handsome; the hand of women had not been on it from the time it had jeft the churn until now-all the work had been done with the ladle.

'If you get a drop of buttermilk from that butter you shall have the whole free. Now taste this and your own; say honestly, if you would not give a higher price for this, than your own. Look at it; see how clear and ransparent these minutes globules are, and how intimate ly blending with the mass. Until all these disappear, the butter will not keep long when they are so slight colored by the milk.

The farmer simply romarked that there was a differnce in all butter, and left me to find a less critical and more ready customer.

It is strange, that when every body loves good butter, and is willing to pay for it, our farmer's wives and daughters do not take pains to make a better article. It s the fault of the women, generally, that we have poor All the world is crazy on the subject of riches-money butter, and we shall hold them responsible.

ESSEX RAIL ROAD.

The following Notice has been issued by the Presiden of the Essex Railroad for the information of the people of Danvers.

Office Essex Railroad Salem, June 30, 1847.

Boston, has been fixed at the following rates, from July

Fer one year

$45. $27. " three months, Between Salem and Danvers, the price will be

Tickets will be issued any day, -but three and sin of the month,—and yearly tickets on the last day of the Quarters, ending March 31, June 30, Sept. 30, and Dec. 31, charging pro rata for extra time. No tickets issued for less than three months.

J. S. CABOT, Pres. Essex R. Road. We do not understand on what principle the above tariff of prices has been established. It is certainly not founded on the relative price of single tickets, or on the number of miles travelled. Taking either of these as a criterion, if the price of Season Tickets for a year from Danvers to Salem, is right at $10, the price of an annual ticket to Boston, should be $90, while the price actually charged is only $67. If the price to Boston is right, the annual Season Ticket to Salem should, by the same rule, not exceed $7.50. We think such a marked distinction in prices against the citizens of Danvers. will be likely to operate more in the favor of the proprietor of the Danvers Hourly, than the Railroad Corpora-

At the above rate the price of Season Tickets from North Danvers to Salem would be $30, which is half the price of a Season Ticket from Salem to Boston !-There is also discrimination in favor of all who have Season Tickets to Boston by which they travel the road for $7 per year instead of $10. Now as those persons who held Season Tickets to Boston will probably travel much oftener over the Essex road and for less money, it seems designed more to help the Eastern R. Road than to accommodate the citizens of Danvers. We hope the Directors of the Essex Railroad will give further attention to this subject and make such changes in their tarriff of prices as will be more likely to give satisfaction to the public.

TOWN TREASURER vs. COLLECTOR. The controversy which has been so long pending be-

NORTHERN FEELING TOWARDS MR. POLK.

During much of the time since the President started on his Northern tour, the weather has been excessively warm. This has probably been gratifying to his feelings as it embles him to say, with truth, that he has in many places met with a warm reception.

. We learn that our neighbors at Lynn are determined to spare no pains to make the Agricultural Fair, there on the 29th of September next, worthy of the place and of the occasion. It is gratifying to observe, that proper precautionary measures have been taken, by the officers of the society, and the authorities of the town of Lynn, to prevent those scenes of riot and excess, so common on such occasions. If there is not power enough in the laws to restrain these, there is still, in Essex County, restraint; and we cannot doubt its beneficial influ-

He was going castward the 6 o'clock train, and had been waiting about the depot for a considerable time. Instead of taking his place properly however, he delayed untill the cars had started and then attempted to step from the baggage table to the platform; but, as he did not succeed in getting proper hold, he was at once jammed between the cor and the partition, and fell across the rail. From this frightful position he was rescued by the quick movement of a bystander He, was conveyed into the office, and Drs. E. B. CONSIDERATE, VERY. The Journal of Commence is the following:

When the President arrived at the ferry, on his way to rooklyn, he was detained a few minutes waiting in e boat. This gave the neighboring stall keepersul. uiterers a grand opportunity to display their patriols. id courtesy, by a shower of presents. One gave his splendid pine apple, which he received with 1 1811. w, and carefully deposited in the bottom of the reige. Another handed him a glass of root beer, while r. Polk gave to one of his attendants. The last poit was a paper of Tobacco, and what became of this,

A SERIOUS ACCIDENT took place at the rail not pot in this city, yesterday afternoon, by which 16 G. Smith, of Boston, was severely, but it is presumed t dangerously injured. He was going eastward : 6 o'clock train, and had been waiting about the de t for a considerable time. Instead of taking his plat! operly however, he delayed untill the cars had started d then attempted to step from the baggage lable b : platform; but, as he did not succeed in getting, oper hold, he was at once jammed between the co d the partition, and fell across the rail. From shtful position he was rescued by the quick more ent of a bystander He was conveyed into the office, d Drs. E. B. Peirson, and Cox, being called, food it two of his ribs were broken, and that he was older se bruised. It was thought safe, however, to send him his home, and he was accordingly placed in the sales the 7 o'clock train, with suitable attendants, and aveyed to Boston.

It is hoped that this example may operate as a wall to the numerous individuals who are constant empting the same rash experiment. Mr. Knight higgige master, is often obliged to interfere to per nt it; and it is probable this disaster would not have ppened, if he had not been detained from his per iliness .- Salem Gazette.

SPECIAL NOTICE. O TEACHERS AND SCHOOL COMMITTEES Published by JOHN P. JEWETT & CO., 22 Cornhill, Boston and 193 Essex St., Salem. THE AMERICAN ACCOUNTANT, an improved system of Book-Keeping by Single and Double Entry, illustrated by apparatus, by Jacob Batchelder, Preceptor of Lynn Academy.

This excellent work, the manuscript of which the author has used with such unpar elleled success for 12 years in his Academy, is now through the urgent solicitations of many experienced Teachers, published and offered to the public. The publishers respectfully call the attention of those interested in this branch of Education to this valuable and original work. The author save in his preface that he has endeavored to give the pupil a clear comprehension of the operation which he has too frequently been required to nerformt years, and fitted so many for the last 10 years, feels connident in being able to suit all cases that may come to him.

CERTIFICATES.

From Dr. John C. Warren, of Boston.

Having had occasion to observe, that some persous afficted with Hernia, having suffered much from the want of skilful workmen in accommodating Trusses to the pecularities of their cases, I have taken pains to inform myself of the competency of Mr. J. Foster, to supply the deficiency occasioned by the death of Mr. Beath.—After some months of observation of his work, I am satisfied that Mr. Foster is well acquainted with the manufacture of the construments, and ingenious in accommodat. there of the c instruments, and ingenious in accommodating them to the variety of cases which occur. I feel myself called upon to recommend him to my professional brethren, and to the public, as a purson well fitted to their wants in regard to these important articles.

From the Portsmouth Journal. WHAT I LOVE.

I love a maiden with a brow As white and spotless as the snow; A brow, which speaks a soul within All guileless, pure and free from sin; A brow an angel might posse s, On which an angel's lip might press.

I love a maiden with an eye That flashes out right merrily-As bright and fair as stars of even. That glitter in the vault of Heaven; Which sendeth forth a wildering glance, That would a stoic's heart entranco.

I love a maiden with a lip From which a bee might honey sip Behind which when the white teeth glow, It seems a rose-bud laid on snow; A lip so rich in dewy bliss An anchorite might love to kiss.

I love a maiden with a foot A fairy's sandal well might suit, That presseth on the green-clad earth, As 'twere a thing of airy birth, 'Neath which the blooming flowers, when prest, Bend as if by the breeze carressed.

I love a maiden with a heart Which consolation may impart To loved ones in Life's weary way And be the broken hearted's stay. Oh yes! let beauty all depart, But give me still the muiden's heart.

THE OLD VAGRANT. Well, in this ditch I reach at last Old, weak, and tired, my closing days; Folks say I've drunk, then hurry past; Good! there's no pity thrown away. Yet some across their shoulders glance; Others a mite or two have thrown: Nay, hasten on, you'll miss the dance; Old vagrant, I can die alone!

. Yes; here, of age, they'll say I'll die; For hunger never kills of course. How often for the workhouse I Hive sighed as for a last resource! But filled each hospital I found, So poor the people now are grown. Ne'er nurse had I but the cold ground; Old vagrant, there I'll die ulone!

at In youth, the artisans I prayed For leave a useful craft to learn. "We are but half employed,' they said; "With us thy bread thou canst not earn." Ye, rich, who still "Go, work," repeat, Scraps from your board you gave, I own; Stretched on your straw my sleep was sweet; I curse not, but I die alone.

I might have stolen, poor soul, 'tis true; But no: I'll beg, and trust in God. At most; the fruit I plucked, that grew Over the hedges on my road. Yet twenty times, by statute-book They barred me in their prisons lone; Towned but sunlight-that they took. Poor vagrant, I can die alone!

Oh, can the poor a country have? What are to me your corn and wine; Your industry; your armies brave; Your parliaments, where statesmen shine! When in your fields, seized by his power, The stranger reaped what you had sown, Like a true fool my eyes did shower. Old vagrant, I shall die alone!

Why, as mere noxious reptiles viewed, Men, do you crush us 'neath your heel? Instruct our minds in what is good; We'll labor for the public weal; Saved from the storm 'neath leafy screen, The worm, in time, an ant has grown; I, too, your brother might have been; Your enemy, I die alone!

FIVE REASONS.—"Mistress Grimes lend me your tub" 'Can't do it—all the hoops are off—it's full of suds—besides I never had one—because I washes in a

An Odd Fellow's Initiation. BY ABEL FLETCHER,

Having been previously proposed and electgo to the Lodge for the purpose of being initiated. My friend, who was already a member of the order, took at. me through many narrow streets and alleys, turned several corners, and finally brought me to a strange looking Auction Bills, Hand Bills, Billheads, Catalogues, Bank in a remote part of the city, where I could not recollect which were reflected from the windows of the adjacent buildings, the one to which my friend had conducted any rate it was an odd looking affair and seemed to be a fit place for the assembling together of a society of

Odd Follows. I followed my friend upon a long winding staircase through several narrow passages, and then up another flight of stairs. Every thing, as I advanced, appeared peculiarly odd and gloomy. The walls were covered with hieroglyphics and drawings of a singular character which could only be seen by the light of a few tapers which were burning feebly at a considerable distance apart. At the head of the stairs, was a long passage, at the extreme end of which could be just discerned the feeble glimmerings of a small blue light. All seemed calculated to excite terror, and, notwithstanding I had often boasted of my courage, yet I began to tremble at the thought of proceeding farther. My friend now took me by the arm and bid me not to be alarmed. At the entrance of the passage, a broad sword hung suspended from the ceiling, and as we advanced, I read inscribed upon the wall, apparently in letters of fire, Secrecy or Denth.' Struck with horror, I determined to return and proceed no further. Accordingly, I wheeled suddenly round and resolved to flee for my life. But lo! the entrance of the passage was closed; a strong iron door had been suddenly shut and locked by an invisible hand, and to escape was impossible. My friend again grasped my arm and assured me that if I would follow him and make no resistance I should not be harmed. Finding that to go back was impossible, and to proceed was my ed to go forward let the consequences be what they

Accordingly I replied that they might inflict what tortures they pleased, but as for me I would not consent to shed the blood of a fellow creature, when dictated by them, or any man or set of men on earth.

It was finally agreed that I should be thrown into the dungeon until next meeting night, and then if I did not consent to take the oath, I should be put to death. A trap in the middle of the floor was now taken up .-

A most horrible stench arose from the space below, which seemed filled with the blackest of darkness. I was now taken by two persons dressed in black gowns, and cast headlong among skulls, toads, and hissing serpents. I was somewhat stunned by the fall. My bedfellow, who was somewhat awakend by the noise, muttered out 'what's the matter?' As soon as I was sufficiently awake, I found that I had tumbled out of bed and was lying on the floor.

Sowing Oats .- Mr. CAMACK: -Some of my neighbors say that I make and save more oats per acre than any one in my vicinity, at least according to the quality of land. As this month is the proper time for count of my management with this crop. Before the seed is sown, I have every stock, shrub and briar cut be-according to the strength of land, always sowing thickest on the strongest land. I have them all well ploughland that is fresh. On such land there is generally a across the stormy sea of life and to endure with fortitude erop of winter or spring weeds, and a turning plough swath. This is what some call a time-saving process, no further comments on the subject, but will merely add, that it reminds me of an old saying, viz: putting in at the spigot and letting out at the bung.

Some planters cut their oats for feeding as soon as hey begin to turn, believing in that state they make the hest food for a horse, as when cured they look nice, and smell like new made hay. I can say to such they are in error. Oats fully ripe are the best to feed with; either in the grain or in the straw cut up. As oats ripen, the straw becomes thinner and soft; and straw of unripe oats when out up is thick and hard like weeds, is mostly rejected by the horse. I am, sir yours &c.,

A CUNNING CAT .- We hardly think that cats regood stories. Having told a dog story lately, we will offset it by a cat story, to-day, which may be relied on as substantially true:

The family of Capt. W-, of Salem, had a fine cat hat was a great favorite and was much petted by them Puss was allowed to spend much of her time in the parlor, and was always uneasy when shut out. One day the parlor door opened and the servant entered and inquired if any thing was wanted, as the bell was rung; the mistress replied that she had not rung the bell. Not many days after, this was repeated; and so continued to be, from time to time to the no small surprise and bewilderment of all concerned. The bell would ring, the servant would enter the parlor, but no one there would know any thing of the matter. Here was a mystery which no one could solve. Was the house haunted?was witch-time coming again?

At length the lady of the house resolved on discoverng the bell-ringer; and a fortunate observation finally led to the detection of the rogue. The lady had remark. ed on more than one occasion that Puss had come into the room with the servant who was so mysteriously called; and she began to suspect that her pet cat had some onnection with this unaccountable bell ringing. She therefore directed the servant to put the cat out of the coom and to watch her movements. It was not long before the parlor bell rang as usual, and on running to the only place where the wires of the bell came within reach vorite lounge, the parlor carpet .- Boston Trave ler.

SECRET OF PILL MAKING .- All the "unequaled arprising" 'astonishing and 'miraculous' vegatable pills which are sold at from 25 to 50 cents per box are composed chiefly of aloes, gamboge and soap, and any apothecary can make up as good a box of pills as realize 50 per cent by the job. Aloes is the principal ingredient; it is a good purgative medicine in some cases, but the use of it sometimes is attended with great inconvenience and danger. No conscientious mancan recomend alcotic pills as a universal medicine. 'Yesterday I heard of a new experiment in preventing hose yellow bugs from killing our cucumbers and other vines in the Spring. Happening to stop at Mr. Holmes shop, he asked me if I wanted to know what would provent the bugs from eating my vines this Spring. I told, him I should be glad to find some antidote, but should not be a full believer until I had proved it. He said I should be satisfied when he told. He said a Mr Besbe. last season, had his vines eaten up two or three times, and he determined to do something to stop them. He took cotton batting, and pealed it off in thin flakes and put over the the plants, and a bug could not get near hem. PRESIDENTIAL RACE! The progress of President Polk, through Salem, attended with so many ludicrons incidents that no description of ours can begin to give an adequate idea of it. So many reports had been in circulation in regard to the time he was to make his appearance, that nobody seemed to know when to expect him; and when he did come, the town was taken unawares. All was hurlyburly, hurry and confusion and the city was "all in the suds" like the good housewife who is unexpectedly called upon to see company, when she is hastily employed at the wash-tub. The cannon gave the signal of the him a marching salute, but the train of carriages dashed by before the line was half formed, and the roll of the drums was lost in the noise of the rattling wheels. On they went pell mell, helter skelter to the tune of Diel take the hindmost." The race about town was thus continued, the flying train running through the streets without regard to the route designated in the published programme of the Committee. The city was in the most admirable confusion and disorder. The women and children were everywhere, the military anywhere, and the cavalende nowhere. People were hurrying hi her and thither, this way and that way, asking each other where they must go to find the President? Sometimes a rush was made one way to intercept the train on its return to the Depot, and then the throng would take another direction,-most generally the wrong one,-until their patience and their breath were alike exhausted Some swore, some scolded and many more laughed at their own ludicrons discomfiture until as a last resort, they nearly all directed their course to the Depot as the surest place to get a view of the object in their

AWARD OF JUDGE WILLIAMS.

Whereas Robert S. Daniels, Treasurer of the Town of Danvers, and Eben S. Williams, of Boston, upon the terms, conditions, and stipulations therein contain ed.

Now therefore, I the said John M. Williams arbitrator. as aforesaid, having taken upon myself the charge of the said arbitration, and having notified and met the said parties, on divers days and times, and fully heard and understood their evidence, proofs, allegations and arguments, and maturely considered the same, have arbitrated, awarded and decided, and do hereby arbitrate, decide, award, determine, and adjudge of an ing the said matter in dispute which was submitted to me as aforesaid, in manner and form following, viz:

The substance of the difference of opinion, discrepan cy in official accounts, and matter in dispute between the said parties, related to the amount of payment made by the said collector to the said treasurer, on the twenty eighth day of February, in the year eighteen hundred and forty four, on account of taxes committed to the said Upton for collection. The suid Upton alledging, at the hearing before the arbitrator, that he paid to the said Daniels on the said day, and on the said account, the sum of thirteen hundred and fifty dollars. The said Daniels admitted the pryment to him by said Upton of the sum of eight hundred and fifty dollars, but denied the payment, at the time, and on the account aforesaid of the further sum of five hundred dollars, or of any further or other sum whatsoever. And my award her is solely and exclusively of and concerning this matter of dispute. I do therefore and thereupon award, arbitrate, decide and adjudge that the said Upton shall allow and pay the said Daniels, treasurer, as aforesaid, the sum of five hundred dollars being the amount in dispute as aforesaid; that the said Upton shall further pay to the said Daniels the sum of seventy five dollars, on account of costs of this reference, and that each party shall pay his own further or other costs of reference. Given under my hand this twenty fourth day of June in the year eighteen hundred and forty seven.

(signed) JOHN M. WILLIAMS. (signed) JOHN M. WILLIAMS.

The above award is founded on the principle that the burden of proof rested on the said Upton, and it did not appear to me at the hearing or otherwise, that the preponderance of evidence was in his favor; but I do not find that either party is chargeable with any fraud, intentional error or want of integrity relative to the mat-But in our hitherto favored land the people are not ter in dispute. From Dr. Greene, Boston.

I have sent many patients to be fitted with Trusses and Abdominal Supporters, by James F. Foster, and he has unformy given full satisfaction in their application.

The benefit of such instruments is often lost, in consequence of their imperfect construction, and from neglect in properly fitting them; on this account, I am in the habit of sending patients to Mr. Foster, confidently believing that he will give them a good article, and see that they are well fitted.

AN HOUR AT THE OLD PLAY-GROUND.

I sat an hour to-day, John, Beside the old brook stream-Where we were school boys in old times. When manhood was a dream; The brook is choked with fallen leaves, The pond is dried away. I scarce believe that you would know The doar old place to day!

The school house is no more, John, Beneath our locust trees, The wild rose by the window side, No more waves in the breeze; The scattered stones look desolate, The sod they rested on Has been ploughed up by stranger hands, Since you and I were gone.

The chesnut tree is dead John, And what is sadder now, The broken grape-vine of our swing Hangs on the withered bough; I read our names upon the bark, And found the pebbles rare, Laid upbeneath the hollow side, As we had piled them there.

Beneath the grass grown bank, John, I looked for our old spring, That bubbled down the ulder path, Three paces from the swing; The rushes grow upon the brink, The pool is black and bare, nd not a foot this many a day It seems has trodden there.

I took the old blind road, John, That wandered up the hill. Tis darker than it used to be, And seams so lone and still; The birds sing yet upon the boughs, Where once the sweet grapes hung, But not a voice of human kind, Where all our voices rung.

I sat me on the fence, John, That lies as in old time, The same balf panel in the path, We used so oft to climb, And thought how o'er the bars of life, Our playmates had passed on, And left me, counting on this spot, : The faces that are gene.

THE ORPHAN'S TEAR. BY BANVARD, THE ARTIST, The sun has set amain, mother, My toilsome task is done, And I have come again, mother, To weep with you alone. I've labored hard the live long day To get wherewith to cat; And at thy feet I've come to pray,

And o'er thy grave to ween The moon is shining bright, mother, O'er the dew-drops on the trees; And they are sparkling bright, mother, Shook by the passing breeze. And as the winds go sighing past, The tall boughs mournful wave; From which the drops are falling fast, Like tears upon thy grave.

The bible I have brought, mother, To read some holy lines, As I always used to, mother, Beneath the flowering vine Which grew in graceful, blooming fold, Above our peaceful cot, And o'er the doorway clambered hold, In many a tangled knet.

My sister, too, was there, mother; Methinks I see her now, As with her curly hair, mother, Clustering o'er her brow; We knelt together by your knee; You taught us both to pray, Alas! dear Emma's gone from me, To Heaven's she's borne away,

When our prayer, had said mother, And th' evening hymn had sung, You put us la the little bed With snow-white curtains hung. You kissed us then, and both you blest; But ah! how changed around! The only place I've now to rest Is the damp and chilly ground.

Now I am left to mourn, mother, To me how sad the day That I was left alone, mother And you were ta'en away. I wish it was that I might die, And by your side lie down: For the world is colder far Than the dark humid ground.

From the Philadelphia Saturday Courier. THE BABY JUMPER.

BY HANNAH HEMPHILL. I had a baby ten months old.

I had no 'baby-jumper.' Talk of infant leveliness, of childish grace and beauty as they will, most people know what a torment, what a never-ending still beginning torment, a buby ten months

Very few people know, what a blessing beyond all description, a 'baby-jumper' is. Perhaps a history of two weeks of my life may serve to exemplify these two facts. It was Monday morning; my husband was to leave home at a early liour for a fortnight's visit to Washington Over a hurried breakfast, two hours earlier than usual, we arranged many plans for the ensuing time of separation. He give me many commissions to execute, and talked of many little things that he would like to have done in his absence, I was to look over and mend all possible articles of man's clothing; to renew buttons and come too large; to hem nine pocket handkerchiefs and mark them with indelible ink; and more than all to put the finishing touches to six shirts, that were already in progress. I was to go to the utmost extremity of the town to make inquiries respecting one John Green. 'You cannot be aware,' said my husband, 'of the importance to me of finding out this man. To a man of business when hurried, these little matters are troublesome in the extreme; but, if you could find it convenient to go up there, some day soon, and find out if he is living

yet, it will be of great service to me.' 'Certainly,' replied I, and added in my zeal, 'I wil

try to go this afternoon.' He departed, and I was left alone-alone with the baby. I must remark, that motives of economy had, had, therefore, but one now. It was washing-day, and dead. And why had I not enquired? The baby she, of course, was engaged in that operation. All other acts of household labor fell to my share, which I performed in haste, anxious to get to my work at my sewward floating scent of soap suds regaled me. After my stones in peace, whilst the baby is tied to a stake, or a active duties were concluded, I took my seat, and began to look over the different piles of clothing, sorting them The baby crept round and round me. slapped to and fro. that I relinquished this station and thome. His surprise was great to behold his soon swing-, years. And it is not strange that it does; for we have been more neglectful of this thing than many other nations less civilized than ourselves. We might if we would, take lessons on this subject, not only of semi-barbarous people, but also of the beasts of the field and the birds of air, to say nothing of the fishes of the sea; for cleanliness is a virtue never neglected among aimost all the lower order of animals. We might enumerate thousands of instances in which we can learn lessons of cleanliness from the lower orders of animated creation; but without these aids, common sense must convince any one that frequent bathing is most essential to our health and happiness. We know of no one thing so useful, and at the same time so much neglected. And it is strange that it is true, when so many facilities, and so cheap, are now offered to our citizens for this health-giving exercise. Men are astonished, and women look wild, when they are told how much matter, in the form of insensible perspiration, passes off daily through the pores of the skin. And yet they neglect to keep these outlets open, and this portion of the depurating system free. Those who now enjoy health must bathe often during the warm weather, if they wish to preserve their health. We would say to all, go and bathe and make clean the outside of the platter at least. And may Heaven help to cleanse the inside, -Boston Mail.

SINGULAR PHENOMENON.

THE New Haven Herald publishes a letter from Woodbury, Ct. giving an account of an incident so rearkable that it would hardly be received for truth, were it not that the writer was a reliable eye-witness of what he decribes. He says:

On the 18th May, an immense flock of birds, comnonly known as chimney swallows, collected over the village, where, by their gyrations, numbers and peculiar notes, they attracted much attention for about two hours. when they began to describe a regular circle in the heavens. This circle the mysterious visitors, by their evolations, made smaller and smaller untill it became quite contracted when suddenly they commenced descending former movements. Soon some of them were seen flying out, and for a few minutes many were moving in each direction, though the greatest number going in,

While the birds continued thus entering and escuping, some individuals approached the well, and for a time, stood directly over it, observing the movements of the little adventurers. The presence of the observers was not at first regarded by them, but they continued their apparent purpose of a visit to the cool waters for a while when they ceased to fly in, and immediately disappeared entirely from the heavens.

On examination, we found the water about four feet below the surface of the ground, and the well in every part completely covered with the birds-many of them dend and others dving, and all as was very manifest.

After all had flown away that seemed able or willing, an individual went into the well in order to remove the rest, but so thick were the birds in the crevices that ho was obliged to clear away numbers to find places for his hands and feet. He collected upwards of seven hundreds, as was found by enumeration, and as many more flew away before he entered.

The object of the visitants no one can divine, and they did not see fit to tell us intelligibly, though they kept up quite a chattering among themselves.

ULTRA POLITENESS,-It is remarked by some writer, that excess of ceremony shows a want of good breeding. This is true. There is nothing so troublesome as overdone politeness; it is worse than overdone beef steak. A truly wellbred man makes every person around him feel at ease; he does not throw civilities

"Mr. Timms,,' said a wag, "how do you keep your books?" "Oh, by double entry." "Double entry, how's that?" "Oh, easy enough. I make one entry and father makes another."

The remainder of the forenoon was occupied in the presentation of the claims of the American Seaman's Friend Society. Report by Rev. Mr. Taylor, of Manchester, address by Rev. M. Bushnell.

The Conference then adjourned to partake of a collation provided for them in the vestry. A large company sat down to the tables, which were tastefully decorated, and amply furnished by the liberality of the society.

A correspondent of the Salem Gazette, speaks thus the entertainment in the vestry:

After the morning exercises, the attendants from abread were welcomed to a bountiful and really sumptuous collation, which was provided in the beautiful rooms beneath the church. There we entertainment rooms beneath the church. There w.s. entertainment for at least 300 persons; and we think not much less could have been the number of those who partook of it, and who were unanimously most emphatic in their commendations of the abundance, the richness, the taste, and the whole order of the grateful festival. The ladies and geatlemen who furnished such hospitalities, are well entitled to all the praise which they received.

At 2 o'clock, P. M., the audience again assembled, and listened to a very able and elaborate report of the American Education Society, frrom the Rev. Mr. Lawrence, of Marblehead. The Secretary of the Parent Society, Rev. Mr. Riddell was present and sustained this report by a few pertinent remarks.

Next in order came the American Tract Society, the report of which was read by Rev. Mr Dule, of Beverly, accompanied by a brief and forcible address from the Rev. Mr. Bliss, of Boston.

Rev. Mr. Crowell, of Essex, then gave the annual. Report of the American Home Missionary Society, and Rev. Mr. Clark, of Boston made a short address. His allusion to the destruction by fire, of a church recently erected on the spot where he stood, and the appeal founded upon it, were exceedingly happy.

The last object presented was the Foreign Missionary Society. Report from Rev. Mr. Worcester, of Sulem, and a touching and impressive address from the Rev. Mr. Laurie, of the Syrian Mission.

Such was the order of exercises, and we have only time to add that the day was propitions, the singing by the choir was of a high order, and an unusually full attendance upon the meetings evinced the deep interest felt on the occasion.

In our last we gave a brief statement if the proceedings that had been taken in relation to the disturbance on the mornings of the 3d and 5th of July. Since then, there has been a more full examination, the result of which is stated in the sketch of the opinion of the magistrate hereunto annexed. We have forebore naming the individuals implicated in these occurrences, because we have no desire to say or do anything to their prejudire; and because we believe what they did was ince siderately done, and will appear wrong and unjustifiable to them and every one upon sober reflection.

We fully concur in the propriety of the disposition the case made by the magistrate; and agree with h m in the hope that such further arrangements will be made as will save the trouble of attendance and exposure at propriety of applying some restraint to such lawless outrages upon the peace and good order of society, and especially in reproving the movements to heap insult and injury upon individuals, because they have dured to have an opinion and express it. The following is a sketch of the opinion of Mr. Proctor in relation to the complaint examined before him. We state the substance briefly, without pretending to use the words in which it was expressed:

This notice of individuals constitutes the distinguishing and the offensive characteristics of the transactions. Had these young men assembled, and manifested the ardor of their p triotism, either by the barning of powder, the beating of drums, or the blowing of horns; and limited their exhibition to this residult contains it would be a such and the state of the such conduct would have been in violation of law, it might very well have been classed under the exception

But the facts disclosed present a very different case. It appears that some 15 or 20 young men assembled at midnight, with drums, horns, guns, pistois, crackers, &c. &c., and paraded the street for half a mile or more to the great disturbance of all in their way, and to he Nichols, Proston, &c. No other reason can be imagined why these individuals should have been distinguished from the rest, excepting that they had been prominent in their effort, to repress such proceedings. Shall such acts of rudeness and insult be overlooked with impunity? Are they justifiable in law? they are not. I believe every candid mind must so determine. CERTIFICATES.

From Dr. John C. Warren, of Boston.

Having had occasion to observe, that some persous afficted with Hernia, having suffered much from the want of skilful workmen in accommodating Trusses to the pecularities of their cases, I have taken pains to inform myself of the competency of Mr. J. F. Foster, to supply the deficiency occasioned by the death of Mr. Beath.—After some months of observation of his work, I am satisfied that Mr. Foster is well acquainted with the manufacture of these instruments, and ingenious in accommodat ture of these instruments, and ingenious in accommodating them to the variety of cases which occur. I feel my ug them to the variety of cases which occur. I feel myself called upon to recommend him to my professional brethren, and to the public, as a purson well fitted to their wants in regard to these important articles.

JOHN C. WARREN, M. D., Boston.

From Dr. Greene, Boston.

I have sent many patients to be fitted with Trusses and Abdominal Supporters, by James F. Foster, and he has unformly given full satisfaction in their application.

The benefit of such instruments is often lost, in consequence of their imperfect construction, and from neglect in properly fitting them; on this account, I am in the habits of sanding nations to Mr. Foster, confidently believing that he will give them a good article, and see that they are well fitted.

SALEM,

VOULD respectfully give notice that he has removed from his old stand, oposite the City Hall, to No 20 Washington street recently occupied by A. E. Phillips, where he is ready to perform all operation in Dentistry, in a most thorough and work-manifie manner. His experience and success in inserting whole sets either by atmospheric pressure or springs, enables him to furnish them at rates which cannot fail to suit those in want of an article of superior anality.

Remember in all cases that you are not deceived by thing that appear to be facts.

Pills have in their composition two of the most valuable medicines in the world, viz: Sarsaparilla and Tomatoes. These two articles need no praise, neither of the celebrated Lorraine' Pills, when they have once been taken. SALEM, of an article of superior quality.

His method of inserting Teeth, both singly and on plate with or without Gums, has been found to be satisfactory and successful as combining beauty of finish and adaptation, with all the requisits of mustication and articulation.

Particular attention paid to filling Teeth so as to render them serviceable for many years, and also to the regulation of Children's Teeth.

N. B. For sale as above, a first rate article of TOOTH POWDER.

Once been taken.

Physicians, and people of every class are willing ocome forward and announce, in the most public manner, that they have been cured of long standing complaints—after all other medicines had failed. In act there can be no doubt but that Lorraine's vegtable Pills is the best medicine ever offered to the public.

OHN P. JEWETT & CO., No 23 Cornhill Boston, and 193 Essex street, Salem, have just puplished one of the most valuable works for Farmers, ever issued from the American press, entitled, The American Veterinarian, or Diseases of Domestic Animals, showing the causes, symptoms, and Remedies, and Rules for Restoring and Preserving Health by good management, with directions for Training and Breeding; by S. W. Cole, editor of the Agricultural Department Boston Cultivator.

Mr. Cole has spent several years in compiling, and testing the facts which he now offers to the Farmers of this country. He has produced a work of great value to every man who keeps but a single Horse or Cow, but to the practical Farmer its value can hardly be over-esti-mated. The whole subject of the Treatment of Domestic Animals is treated in the most thorough manner, com prising the Horse, Ox, Cow, Sheep, Hog, Dogs, Hens, Turkeys, Geese, Birds, Bees, &c., &c. The whole is comprised into one volume of 288 closely printed pages, with 7 beautiful wood engravings, firmly bound in leather. To be sold at the low price of 50 cents, in order to bring it within the means of every man. No pains or expense have been spared on the part of the author of the publishers to produce a work worthy a place in every Poetry.

"FATHER, FORGIVE THEM, THEY KNOW NOT WHAT THEY DO!"

When friends, who seem'd to love us, Have proved unkind, unjust, And all our hearts' affections Are trampled in the dust; And when-life's chief joys vanish'd-We mourn the false, th' untrue, 'Father,' we cry, 'forgive them; They know not what they do!'

When the keen shafts of malice, Of hatred, envy, pride, Have pierced the trusting bosom Which would not, could not chide; Yea, when men falsely charge us With crimes of darkest bue, 'Father,' we cry, 'forgive them, They know not what they do!'

And when, in our distresses, Pretended friends betray, And blight in sorrow's season, Hopes of a happier day; And when their false professions Lie open to our view, 'Father,' we cry, forgive them; They know not what they do!

And though the murderous dagger Be lifted up on high, To pierce us in a moment When no kind aid was nigh; Ven when the dark assessing 'Father,' we cry, 'forgive them; They know not what they do!'

And when our names are slander'd, Our characters made black, And calumny draws near us, With venom in its track; Still, still for those who hate us. Who once our friendship knew. 'Father,' we cry, 'forgive them; They know not what they do!'

Nor was this a feeling of a school-boy only it pervaded, I believe, every human being that approached Washington; and I have been told that, even in his social and convivial hours, this feeling in those who were honored to share them, never suffered intermission. I saw him a landred times afterwards, but never with any other than that same feeling. The Almighty, who raised up for our hour of need a man so peculiarly prepared for its whole dread responsibility, seems to have put an impress of sacredness, upon his own instrument. The first sight of the man struck with involuntary homage and prepared everything around him to obey. When he "addressed himself to speak," there was an unconscious suspension of the breath, while every eye was raised in expectation. At the time I speak of he stood in silence, and had that statue-like air which mental greatness alone can bestow. As he turned to enter the building and was ascending the stair-case leading to the congressional hall, I glided along unperceived, almost under cover of the skirts of his dress, and entered instantly after him into the lobby of the house which was of course in session to receive him.

I couldn't help comparing the proceedings in which he showed great dexterity: where a couple was married at Lawrenceburg many years ago, when Indianna formed a part of the great North Western Territory. At that time the settlements of the emigrants were mostly confined to the rich bottom lands of the water courses. Lawrenceburg was then a small village with a few log cabins. father was acting magistrate for the district, and very promptly attended to the various duties of office, in addition to which he was in the habit of doing a good deal of manual labor on his own hook.

CURIOUS CASE OF IDIOCY. We lately met with an English periodical, the following account of the singular propensity of a poor idiot, who seemed to manifest no mental powers, excepting in catching or entrapping bees,

A BEE EATER. We had in this village, more than wenty years ago an idiot boy, whom I well remember, who from a child, shewed a strong propensity to bees; they were his food, his amusement, his sole object. And as people of this cast have seldom more than one point in view, so this lad exerted all his few faculties on this one pursuit. In the winter he dosed away his time, within his father's house, by the fireside, in a kind of torpid state, seldom departing from the chimney corner; but in the summer he was all alert, and in quest of his. game in the fields, and on sunny banks. Honey-bees, humble-bees, and wasps, were his prey wherever he found them; he had no apprehensions from their stings, but would seize them nudis manibus, and at once disarm them of their weapons, and suck their bodies for the sake of their honey bags. Sometimes he would fill his bosom between his shirt and his skin with a number of these captives; and sometimes would confine them in bottles.

He was a very merops apiaster or bee-bird; and very injurious to men who kept bees; for he would slide into their bee-gardens, and sitting down before the stools bees as they came out. He has been known to overturn hives for the sake of honey, of which he was passionately fond. Where metheglin was making, he would linger round the tubs and vessels, begging a draft of what he called bee-wine. As he ran about he used to make a humming noise with his lips, resembling the buzzing of bees. This lad was lean and sallow, and of a cadaverous complexion; and, except in his favorite pursuit, in which he was wonderfully adroit, discovered no manner of understanding.'

It is said that the world is all sordid and selfish. We don't believe it. On enquiring the other day, the cirone of our hotels, we were told that he was poor, andsupported himself by working as a lawyer's clerk. He had in his early manhood, been wealthy, but he loved a beautiful girl, who, unfortunately had bestowed her ascertaining this, the rejected lover conveyed all his property to the fortunate one, on condition that he married the girl. He saw the union consummated, and went to work-a poor but contented man. We look upon the old gentleman with reverence, for his nobility of soul .- Daily Chronicle.

OLD GENTLEMEN.

We used to think that when a man arrived to fourscore years, that they were good for nothing but food for worms. We have altered our opinion. We know of several gentleman who have reached the age of eighty years and upwards who are pleasant, cheerfull, spry, active, and happy, and about as good as new, for all the stirring purposes of life. They talk about building railroads, and other public benifits, as if they were just stepping on the threshold of life. We like them. They possess the right spirit. Why should men think they must die, when they are old and half worn out? The idea is absurd. Men are never too old to move and act, while they have sound minds and healthy bodies. Not one in a thousand dies of old age, and the man of eighty may live a score of years longer, for ought we know, and then not die of old age. The reason why hundreds sink into the grave when they have reached but three score years and ten, is, they give up their business, and worry themselves to death, thinking of their age.

RUMORS FROM THE SEAT OF WAR.

We receive by every mail which comes to us, new and contradictory rumors from our army. Rumors of jengagements in battle and negotiations for peace. Reports that numbers of soldiers whose terms of enlistment have expired, have left the sickly plains of Mexco for their homes; and reports that new recruits are volunteering their services, and that many have re-enlisted whose first term had expired. Some letter writters represent the Mexican country as a very fertile tract of land "flowing with milk and honey," and others say, that its resources are abundant, but indolence and ignorance have suffered it to remain uncultivated, and even the milk and articles of food purchased of the natives for the use of the soldiers are mixed with poison before they are offered for sale. In addition to these there are runiors that Gen. Taylor is about to resign his post, and that Gen. Scott has been superseded in his command by a Mr. Trist, --- a clerk in the State Department--- who has recently been commissioned and sent to Mexico by the Secretary of the War. His commission virtually renders Gen. Scott and his army subordinate to his auhority.

Such are some of the accounts concerning the state of affairs in Mexico, which have come to us within a few days. We will not vouch for their authenticity but leave our readers to receive and reject such as they please. We give below the latest rumors which have urday afternoon, at the Maine Railroad Depot. It con-

The New York Courier asserts that Mr Trist, a clerk in the State department, who is with Gen Scott having been sent out by the Secretary of War, as his first business handed by Gen Scott, at Jalapa, a sealed packet addressed to the Mexican Secretary of State. Gen Scot, in writing, promptly and explicitly declined such an unu. sual responsibility. Mr. Trist then exhibited to Gen. Scott, a letter from the Secretary of War, showing that Trist was invested with such power, as would deprive Gen Scott, virtually, though not formally of his command and make him subordinate to this clerk of Itis State Deof War, repeating the Declaration he had made to Mr. Trist, that he should not permit Trist to interfere with the operation of the army, which was under his command, and that under the circumstances in which the army was placed, he should retain the actual command unless formally recalled.

The Courier adds "this correspondence is on file at Washington: and although we do not pretend to give the language used by either party, we appeal with confidence to the documents, for full confirmation of this statement of their purport.

The New Orleans Picayune says:

On the 26th ult. rumors, which the Republicano calls "very alarming," were in circulation in the capital. It was said that the Mexican Government had acceded to the mediation of England; that the English secretary of legation had been down to Puebla and returned on the 24th; that the object of his visit was to negotiate with Gen. Scott a treaty of peace; that the terms agreed upon between them would be the surrender of the Californias to the Americans, the recognition of the independence of Texas, and the acknowledgment of the line of 36 deg. as the Northern boundary between the Unitel States and Mexico. [This line would give Sante Fe and over a third of New Mexico to the United States. 1

The Republicano has no faith in these rumors. It denounces them as false, but at the same time in such a manner as to betray its fears lest the rumors should be true. The existence of these rumors confirms the information we derived from a distinct source in Vera Cruz, that Mr. Buchanan's letter was transmitted through lead the reader to attach some faith to the terms of treaty which are enumerated above. LATER FROM MEXICO. Vera Cruz dates to the 7th, and letters from the city to one hundred and seventy, who have been released and sent to Tampico. The officers are still in Mexico, but Major Gaines had received assurances from Gen. Scott that immediately on his arrival in the vicinity of the city, he will make peremptory demands for their release. Gen. Scott had exerted himself in vain to insure their release. Major Gaines says all of Gen. Scott's measures are taken preparatory to moving onwards, and preparations are nearly completed, having force sufficient to accomplish his objects effectually, and had positive information of his readiness to move on the Capital three or four days from the date of the letter.

The Legislature of New Hampshire has during its fate session re-enacted the old Militia Law, with some additions, establishing schools of instruction for officers. The Portsmouth Journal says concerning the law;-

The only certainty is that militia trainings and mus ers are restored; and two or three times a year the active population of the State is to be turned out, to march up and down street for the amusement of children, and in order that a few young men with epaulets and chapeaux de bras may exhibit their new uniforms. We are of opinion that the great body of the people of this State do not believe in the necessity of these trainings and musters; we believe that the burden falls too unequally upon the masses; the rich man willingly pays the trivial fine, and is rid of the whole trouble; the poor man will not pay the fine, and is of course subjected to all the labor and fatigue of supporting the 'Institution.' Militia musters are pleasant things for young officers, perhaps, and afford scenes of amusement to youthful spectators; but the hard-working laborer who is withdrawn from his remunerating day's work to make part of the show, will hardly be reconciled to this renewal of

ESSEX RAILROAD.

The annual Meeting of the Essex Railroad Company was holden at the Mansion House, in this city, on Monlotment, alterature, &c., fulfilling all these and various Stockholders and a manifestation of interest in the conday last. There was an unusual large attendance of the cerns of the Corporation and success of the road, which It is a matter of wonder with your correspondent that which was read by the President gave an account of the was highly gratifying. The report of the Directors, people should leave the pumps and wells of their own operations thus far, the most material facts of which have been already stated in the papers, from time to time. Since the opening of the road to South Danvers, on the 20th January last, 30,777 passengers have been conveyed over it. The subscriptions to the stock amount to $302,000. This does not include the loan of $43 827-73, received of the Eastern Co. In the contract which has been concluded for the iron, there is a saving of $17 per ton, on the estimated cost, and the Directors express a confident belief that the cost of the road in the aggre gate, will not exceed the engineer's estimate.

The Act of the last Session of the Legislature, authorizing the Company to construct branches to the Iron Factory in Danvers, to some point in Beverly or Salem Harbor and to the Naunikeng Cotton Company's Wharf was unanimously accepted. The Directors recommend that measures be immediate'v taken to form a communication with the deep waters of the harbor. They have eccived a proposition from Hon. S. C. Phillips, in relaion to the terminus of the road on the harbor, which is now under consideration by a committee of the directors, o whom the consideration of the extension of the road has been committed, in anticipation of the action of he corporation upon the subject.

A discussion in reference to the contract with the Eastern R. R. Co., for operating the road was terminated by a motion to lay the subject on the table. Stephen A. Chase then offered the following propos

tions which were unanimously adopted, viz: Voted, That it is important to the interests of the Essex Railroad Corporation, to secure a direct and independent communication between some convenient point ing and Preserving Health by good management, with directions for Training and Breeding; by S. W. Cole, editor of the Agricultural Department Boston Cultivator.

A BOOK FOR EVERY FARMER.

OHN P. JEWETT & CO., No 23 Cornhill Boston, and 193 Essex street, Salem, have just puplished one of the most valuable works for Farmers, ever issued from the American press, entitled. The American Vete

Mr. Cole has spent several years in compiling, and testing the facts which he now offers to the Farmers of this country. He has produced a work of great value to every man who keeps but a single Horse or Cow, but to the practical Farmer its value can be all the country.

Poetrn.

The spring of life is past, With its budding hopes and fears, And the autumn time is coming With its weight of weary years-Our joyousness is fuding, Our hearts, are dimmed with care. And youth's fresh dreams of gladness All perish darkly there.

While bliss was blooming near us In the heart's first bust of spring, While many hopes could cheer us, Life seemed a glorious thing! Like the foam upon a river When the breeze goes rippling o'er, These hopes have fled forever To come to us no more!

'Tis sad-yet sweet-to listen To the soft wind's gentle swell, .And think we hear the music Our childhood knew so well; To gaze out on the even, · And the boundless fields of air, And feel again our boyhood's wish To roam, like angels, there!

There are many dreams of gladness That cling around the past-And from that tomb of feeling Old thoughts come thronging fust-The forms we loved so dearly In the happy days now gone, The beautiful and lovely So fair to look upon.

Those bright and gentle maidens Who seemed so formed for bliss, Too glorious and too heavenly For such a world as this; Whose soft dark eyes seemed swimming In a sea of liquid light, And whose locks of gold were streaming O'er brows so sunny bright:

Whose smiles were like the sunshine In the spring-time of the year-Like the changeful gleams of April They followed every tear! They have passed—like hope—away— All their lovliness has fled-Oh-many a heart is mourning That they are with the dead.

Like the brightest buds of summer They have fallen from the stem-Yet oh-it is a lovely death To fade from earth like them!

And yet—the thought is saddening To muse on such as they-And feel that all the beautiful Are passing fast away! That the fair ones whom we love, Like the tendrils of a vine, Grow closely to each loving heart, Then perish on their shrine!

And can we but think of these In the soft and gentle spring, When the trees are waving o'er us And the flowers are blossoming! For we know that winter's coming With his cold and stormy sky-And the glorious beauty round us Is budding but to die!

The Adventures of a Wooden Leg.

Before you had those timber toes, Your love I did allow, But then you know you stand upon Another footing now.

I am one of those unfortunate wights who have found pose of mending their mortal frame. I was born compose of mending their motion, and with a pair of as sturplete, as sound as a pumpkin, and with a pair of as sturservant a note to Mr. Clackabout, requesting the leg in Mars, the first time after his election.

tical faculty, to a stick of wood.

During the last war with Great Britain, I served in our army on the frontier. I was in many haters but managed throughout nearly the whole of this conflict to keep lead and cold iron out of me. I began to think myself bullet proof, but never was a conjurer more mistaken, as I soon found out, by the help of a cannon ball, at the battle of Plattsburg, which took off my leg just following: below the knee. This happened in the beginning of the action, and I fell into the enemy's hands. We got the and requests he will have the goodness to despatch him perpendicularly by his right side, without relaxing the victory at last as is well known, and when the British retreated I was carried off by them along with some of their wounded. I was duly reported by the American C.'s cellar door last evening.' returns among the missing, and my friends all imagined me dead.

After lying some time in the British hospitals I was sent to Montreal, where I met with a very ingenious admirably constructed with springs and hinges, that, af-Boston after the peace, and received by my friends, as all, this wooden leg! Oh monstrous! one risen from the dead. They little imagined on seeng me safe and hearty, that I had one foot in the grave. solved to take no pains to divulge the secret, but if I got his leg had never been ill. a kick upon my wooden shin, even to scratch where it . Not ill to be sure,' said Mr. Cluckabout, 'but terri-

The pertinacity with which I struck to this determinntion, has led me into the oddest adventures. I was kicked by a horse on my fictitious limb, and to the astonishment of every body, walked off without much inconvenience as a sprained ankle. I was bitten by a mad dog most furiously in the same place, and every one prophesied that I should die, but I got well of the bite and amazed them all. A cart wheel ran over my foot, and jammed it into a cocked hat; no one admired the fortitude with which I bore the pain. Walking home one cold day with the Doctor, I stepped with my leg deep in a puddle of water. The Doctor was positive that I should take cold in consequence of it, and I won a wager of him by not coming off hoarse the next morning to his utter astonishment.

But this unfeeling limb of mine has sometimes brought me into awkward scrapes. I shall never forget how supremely foolish I felt one evening, when I had been ridiculing most unmercifully a certain foppish, conceited pragmatical fellow about town; all this I did in the presence of his two sisters, whom I did not know to he such, and never imagining that my friend Walter, who sat next me, would allow me to rongon in such a strain/without apprising me of the blunder I was committing. Why, you incomprehensible fellow,' said he to me, as soon as we came away, 'what the vengeance possessed you to keep on talking in that style, when I was treadng on your toe every instant to make you stop?

Once, indeed, I came very near being discovered, and the artifice by which I escaped detection had the stranest effects. Who would believe that the ghost of wooden leg could break off a match, or that by saving my limb, I made Mr. Beau Bubbleton lose his mistress I will tell the whole story, for it is seldom that a wooden leg has kicked up such a dust.

One very dark evening I was walking homeward through a street where the sidewalk was somewhat narrow, and the cellar entrances projected quite out to the curbstone. One of these happened to be covered with a wooden grating, and in walking over it I trod in the durk upon a defective part and my foot broke through. It was my leg and in the endeavor to extricate it, the unfortunate limb broke loose and fell into the cellar.

Here was a terrible awkward situation for a fine gencover me. Luckily I had my walking stick, and with I had lost my leg, and no one could make me another, or if it could be replaced, it could not be effected withget wind. What should I do! I knew the house into

of the bag. I thought of Beau Babbleton, the foppish ed of all observers, the military chieftain of the town of fellow mentioned above, as a personage on whom I Hornby! It is needless to add that his licious valor is that of the bold captain, whose experience of war's horrors was confined to fighting with powder in sham fights. He was once in a real battle, and seemed to enjoy it with keen zest. Nothing could exgiee. Suddenly a bullet whized through his cocked hat. At first amazement stupified him his brains seemed carried away. Then slowly uncovering, he gazed at the hole which the lead had perforated in its hasty tour thro his chap au, and with a voice indicative of the was chasing him. The truth is, as another has said, that Militia captains are the illegitimate sons of Mars, and have no burning desire to win immortal renown at the expense of mortal existence. They can hew the air with great coolness on a muster field, but when made a target for cannon and musicet balls, their courage is apt to become Bob-Acro-ish, and coze out at their finger's ends. The next moment I heard a succession of small strokes or taps, so rapid as to be almost indistinguishable; and hardly had my eye time to observe a large number of dots made along the margins of the rivers, when the Lintx, Vienna, Prague, Dresden, Berlin, &c., struck my car. At this point of the exercise, the spot which had been occupied on the black board was nearly a circle, of which the starting point, or place where the teacher first began, was the centre; but now a few additional strokes around the circumference of the incipient continent, extended the mountain ranges outward toward the plains - the children responding the names of the countries in which they respectively lay. Seas; and all so accurately proportioned, that I think only slight errors would have been found, had it been subjected to the test of a scale of miles. A part of this time was taken up in correcting a few mistakes of the pupils, for the teacher's mind seemed to be in his ears as well as in his band; and notwithstanding the astonishing celercity of his movements, he detected erroneous seed should be sown in damp weather to ensure its answers, and turned round to correct them. The rest of the recitation consisted in questions and answers respecting productions, climate, soil, animals, &c.

From Dr. John C. Warren, of Boston,
Having had occasion to observe, that some persons afflicted with Hernia, having suffered much from the want of skilful workmen in accommodating Trusses to the pe-cularities of their cases, I have taken pains to inform myself of the competency of Mr. J. P. Foster, to supply the deficiency occasioned by the death of Mr. Beath.— After some months of observation of his work, I am satis-fied that Mr. Foster is well acquainted with the manufacned that Mr. Foster is well acquainted with the manufacture of these instruments, and ingenious in accommodating them to the variety of cases which occur. I feel myelf called upon to recommend him to my professional rethren, and to the public, as a person well fitted to heir wants in regard to these important articles.

JOHN C. WARREN, M. D., Boston.

From Dr. Greene, Boston.

I have sent many patients to be fitted with Trusses and Abdominal Supporters, by James F. Foster, and he has unformly given full satisfaction in their application.

The benefit of such instruments is often lost, in consequence of their imperfect construction, and from neglect in properly fitting them; on this account, I am in the habit of sending patients to Mr. Foster, confidently believing that he will give them a good article, and see that they are well fitted.

From Dr. Robbins, Ruchury.

Since the death of Mr. John Beath, I have used, in preference to all other Trusses those made, by Mr. J. F.

AN EVENING HYMN. BY THOMAS MILLER, BASKET-MAKER. How many days, with mute adieu, Have gone down von untrodden sky! And still it looks as clear and blue, As when it first was hung on high. The rolling sun, the flying cloud That threw the lightning in its rear, The thunder trampling deep and loud, Have left no dark impression there.

The village bells, with silver chime, Come softened by the distant shore; Though I have heard them many a time, They never rang so sweet before. A silence rests upon the hill; A listening awe pervades the air; The very flowers are shut and still, And bowed as if in silent prayer.

The darkening woods, the fading trees, The grasshopper's last feeble sound, The flowers just wakened by the breeze, All leave the stillness more profound. The twilight takes a deeper shade, The dusky pathways blacker grow, And silence reigns in glen and glade, And all is mute below.

Now shine the starry hosts of night, Gazing on earth with golden eyes; Bright guardians of the blue browed night, What are ye in your native skies? I know not! neither can I know, Nor on what leader ye attend, Nor whence ye came, nor whither go,

Yet there ye shine and there have shone, In one eternal hour of prime, Each rolling burningly, alone, Through boundless space and countless time. Ave, there ye shine, ye golden dews, That pave the realins by seraphs trod; There, through you echoing vaults diffuse The song of choral worlds to God.

Gold wears to dust-yet there ye are, Time rots the diamond-there ye roll In primal light, as if each star Enshrined an everlasting soul! And does it not-since your bright throngs One all-enlightening spirit own, Praised there by pure sidereal tongues, Eternal, glorious, blest, alone ?

Could men but see what ye have seen-Unfold awhile the shrouded past, From all that is, is what has been-The glance how rich! the range how vast! The birth of time, the rise, the fall Of empires, myrind ages flown, Thrones, cities, tongues, arts, worships-all The things whose echoes are not gone.

And there ye shine, as if to mock The children of a mortal sire, The storm, the bolt, the earthquake's shock The red volcano's cataract fire, Drought, famine, plague, and blood and flame, All nature's ills and life's worst woes, Are nought to you, ye smile the same, And scorn alike their dawn and close.

Not only doth the voiceful day Thy loving kindness, Lord, proclaim-But night with its sublime array Of worlds doth magnify thy name! Yea-while adoring seraphims Before thee bend the willin knee From every star a choral hymn Goes up unceasingly to thee!

Oh Holy Father! 'mid the calm And stillness of this evening hour, We here would lift our solemn psalm To praise thy goodness and thy power! And worlds beyond the furthest star Whose light hath reached the human eye, Shall catch the anthem from afar And roll it through immensity!

Kept by thy goodness through the day, Thanksgiving to thy name we pour; Night o'er us, with its stars, we pray

In grief console—in gladness bless— In darkness, guide-in sickness, cheer-Till, in the Saviour's righteousness, Before thy throne our souls appear. Thy love to guard us evermore!

From the St. Lenis Reville. Speculation in Whiskers. Or, Shaving in a Broker's Office.

BY SOL SMITH.

There lived in Milledgeville, in 1832, a daudified in dividual whom we will call Jenks. This individual had a tolerable favorable opinion of his personal appearance. His fingers were hooped with rings, and his shirt bosom was decked with a magnificent breast pin; coat, hat, vest and boots were made exactly to fit; he wore kid gloves of remarkable whiteness; his hair was oiled and dressed in the latest and best style; and to complete his killing appearance, he sported an enormous pair of Real Whiskers. Of these whiskers, Jenks was as proud as a young cat is of her tail, when she first discovers she has one.

I was sitting one day in a broker's office, when Jenks came in to inquire the price of exchange on New York. He was invited to sit down, and a cigar was offered him. Conversation turning on the subject of buying and selling stocks, a remark was made by a gentleman present, that he thought no persons should sell out stock in such and such a bank, at that time, as it must get better in a few days.

I will sell any think I've got, If I can make any thing on it, remarked Jenks.

Oh, no, replied one-not any thing; you wouldn't sell your WHISKERS! A loud laugh followed this chance remark. Jenks immediately answered answered: I would--but who would want them? Any person making the purchase, would lose money by the operation, I'm think-Well, I observed, I would be willing to take the speculation, if the price could be made reasona

Oh, I'll sell 'em cheap, answered Jenks, winking a the gentlemen present. What do you call cheap? I inquired.

I'll sell 'em for fifty dollars, Jenks answered, puffiing forth a cloud of smoke across the counter, and repeating

Well, that is cheap; and you'll sell your whiskers for ifty dollars? I will.

Both of them? Both of them. I'll take them! When can I have them? Any time youth choose to call for them. Very well-they're mine. I think I shall double my noney on them, at least.

I took a bill of sale as follows: Received of Sol. Smith Fifty Dollars in full for my crop of whiskers, to be worn and taken care of by me and delivered to him when called for.

The sum of fifty dollars was paid, and Jenks left the broker's office in high glee, flourishing five Central Bank X's, and telling all his acquaintances of the great bargain he had made in the sale of his whiskers.

The broker and his friends laughed at me for being taken in so nicely. Never mind, said I, let those laugh that win; I'll make a profit out of those whiskers, depend on it. For a month after this, whenever I met Jenks, be asked me when I intended to call for my whiskers? I'll let you know when I want them, was always my answer. Take good care of them-oil them occasional ly: I shall call for them one of these days.

A splendid ball was to be given to the members the Legislature. I ascertained that Jenks was to be one of the managers—he being a great ladies' man, (on account of his whiskers, I suppose,) and it occurred to me that before the ball took place, I might as well call for my whiskers. One morning I met Jenks in a barber's shop. He was adonizing before a large mirror, and combing up my whiskers at a great rate. Ah! there you are, old fellew, said be, speaking to my reflection in the glass. Come for your whiskers, I suppose? Oh, no hurry, I replied, as I sat down for a shave.

Always ready, you know, he answered, giving a final tie to his cravat. Come to think of it, I said, musingly, as the barber would be as good a time as another; you may sit down and let the barbar try his hand at the whiskers. You could'nt wait until to-morrow, could you? he asked, hesitatingly. There's a ball to-night you

He rather sulkily obeyed, and in a few moments his cheeks were in perfect foam of lather. The barber flourished his razor, and was about to commence operations, when I suddenly changed my mind.

sell them if I can obtain a good price. What is your price? One hundred dollars must double my money.

Nothing less? Not a farthing less-and I'm not anxious to sell even at that price.

Well, I'll take them, he grouned there's your money; and here, barber, shave off this infernal whisker in less than no time-I shall be late at the ball. The barber accomplished his work, and poor Jenks

OUR POPULATION.

We have been furnished by the politeness of the Town Clerk, with statistics from his books, which confirm the impressions we have had that there has been a decline in the population of the town, the past year, For the five or six preceding years the returns of scholcrease of about five per cent. The less the last year has been a fraction over one per cent. It appears from the following table, showing the number of scholars between the ages of 4 and 16 years that the greatest loss has occurred in No. 14. (the new Tanleyville District) and in No. 8 (the Rocks District.) There has been a large gain in No 11 which is the central District in the South parish and also a gain of 10 in No. 5. in the North part of the town.

The Journal also says that a very pretty girl, 15 years old. named Margaret Blackburn, left her home about a week ago, with her aunt, to attend a pic nic at Reading. She was there seen conversing with a man named Smith, and has not since been heard from. Smith is said to be a married man, and it is believed he persuaded the girl to elope with him. Her mother is in deep distress, and would gladly receive any information of her lost child. She lives at No. 13 Wharf street, Boston.

JOHN C. WARREN, M. D., Boston.

From Dr. Greene, Boston.

I have sent many patients to be fitted with Trusses and Abdominal Supporters, by James F. Foster, and he has unformly given full satisfaction in their application.

The benefit of such instruments is often lost, in consequence of their imperfect construction, and from neglect in properly fitting them; on this account, I am in the habit of sending patients to Mr. Foster, confidently believing that he will give them a good article, and see that they are well fitted.

From the Hampshire Herald. FOOLISH WORLD-GOOD NIGHT.

BY LEWIS BELDEN. All those who act on life's broad stage, 'Tween early youth and late old age, From every scene may take their flight, And bid a foolish world good night.

The infant in the nurse's arms, Endowed with all those childish charms, May fall by dire diseases' blight, And bid a foolish world good night.

The school-boy who, at sportive play, Spends many a joyous, live-long day, Oft lay aside his hook and kite To bid a foolish world good night.

The soldier, who, to gain a name For daring deeds, immortal fame, Fights! falls! to die! the dust to bite. And bid a foolish world good night.

The Reverend fop, with many coats, The rich, his sheep, -the poor, his gonts, Leaves purse, and scrip, and widow's mite, To bid a foolish world good night.

And then the farmer, rough and raw, Unread in rules of rigid law, A rural king;

By reason taught both wrong and right, Must bid a foolish world good night,-Death, where's thy sting?

We've seen the man of late old age .-The book was there, though blank the page,-So wan and wild, He thought his day of life just dawning, And bid a foolish world good morning.-Was twice a child.

The slave, from Afric's sunny soil, The galling lash, the servile toil, Most cheerfully resigns his breath,-A foolish world, a happy death,-Good night.

Life's turbid tide is ebbing low. A world! a world of joyous woe, Death's rubicon soon meets our sight,-Then, foolish world a long good night.

Then ere we 'rive at death's pale border, Be sure and set our house in order; Act well our part, see all things right, And bid a foolish world good night,

FOR THE COURIER LINES WRITTEN ON THE DEATH OF ELIAS PUT-

NAM, Esq., BY A. B. FLANDERS. O mourn him not-he's far away. In you bright world on high, The spirit bird has plumed his wings And soured to yonder sky. O mourn him not.

O mourn him not-his sorrow's past, He's free from earthly care, He has tried in vain earth's gli tering gain, Contentment is not here. O mourn him not.

O mounn him not-though hard to part, From his loved form so dear, The battle's fought-he's gained the crown, His spirit lingers near, The lonely heart to cheer.

O mourn him not-he suffered long, His body racked with pain, He has burst the bands that girt him round, And gone with Christ to reign, O mourn him not.

O mourn him not-you'll meet again, When dissolution's past, He'll be the first to welcome home His bosom friends at last. O mourn him not.

Then mourn him not—as one that's dead, He speaks from heaven to day, And bids you dry your weeping eyes, And meet him in the sky. Then mourn him not.

THE REPOSITORY. A TALE.

"I cannot account for it, mother, but I feel so anxious and so timid at the thought of going to the Repository—I fear the ladies who manage the establishment may not think these things worthy of a place in it,' said Caroine Bradley, in a low voice, to her grief-worn widowed parent, as the latter sat holding on her knee and to her bosom a fair-headed boy, whose countenance and sunken eyes testified that sickness and want had recently been exerting, but too strongly their baleful influence upon his frame.

'And yet,' continued Caroline in a still more subdued tone, 'poor Alice was always thought to draw so well! The mother sighed deeply-casting at the same time mournfully expressive glance toward a corner of the neanly furnished apartment, where lay asleep on a low curtainless bed, the fever-wasted form of her fair-haired and once blooming Alice-her beloved firstborn. A tear dropped from the parent's eye. Caroline observed the took and the results.

'Oh, mother!' she exclaimed, 'you do not think Alice -our own dear Alice-worse? She has slept soundly for these two or three hours, and we were told, you re member, that this would be a favorable sign; this is the first time that she has slopt so calmly and sweetly.'

Again the mother cast her eye on the form that reposed on the humble couch, and said with a sad expres-

'I would not causelessly depress your hopes, my kind Caroline, and I do think the violence of the fever is abated with Alice, as it has been for some days with this poor boy. But her father's death weighs sadly upon her and their is another crushing load that lies upon her young affections; have you not heard her murmer, in her broken dreams, the name of her betrothed, and speak to him as if she believed him to lie under the deep sea?-Edward Omar's silence for a year, or rather his deferred return, was pressing grievously, though secretly, upon your sister, before this illness, Caroline, and now it is hastening her.'-

Tears stopped the mother's speech, and Caroline could not and did not attempt to reply.

But Caroline, my duteous and affectionate Caroline, contined Mrs. Bradley, when she had regained her composure in some measure, 'we must not cease to exert ourselves, for while there is life there is hope. 'It is our last resource, Caroline, for our money is go so much, will support you still.'

'No more, mother-it is enough,' cried Caroline; and wrock of her fallen family.

Caroline Bradley soon arrived at the Repository, an establishment (it is scargely necessary to tell our readers) where small ornamental articles of female workmanship were purchased and sold, and which was instutel and managed by a number of respectable ladies .--Caroline tremblingly knocked at the door of this place, and, on its being opened was ushered into a back apartment, where several females were waiting with the same object as herself. Those individuals, however, unlike the new-comer, were cheerful and happy, and as they waited to be received in turns, engaged themselves in light-hearted conversation. Poor Caroline placed herself in a corner, and sat unheeded by any of her temporary companions, who, indeed, seemed to despise the unknown stranger, attired as she was in a sorely worn covered up her fine features. The object of their neglect-nay, we are sorry to say, of their sucers-heeded them not; her thoughts had wandered back to that poorly furnished home, where her beloved sister and brother languished in sickness and sorrow. Caroline was so struck with disappointment, that she felt herself unable to speak in reply to this chilling decision. A sickening feeling of despair crept over her as she silently folded up the articles, and prepared to leave er's kiss on Caroline's brow; yes Caroline it is Edward He kept near him the likeness of his departed friend, the room. In their turn, Mrs Bradley and Caroline communi cated to Edward the sad story of their reverses, (which were the consequences of a lawsuit,) of Mr Bradley's death, and of the illness with which the family had been visited. HORSE HAY RAKES.

Our farmers are now awake to the advantages of raking hay, on plain fields, with horse power. Various are the forms and the labors of these rakes. The simplest are best of course; but as our farmers are not many of them good judges of the performances of these implements, having never compared two together, they judge by the looks, and of course select the kinds that are moscomplicated.

We see various kinds of revolving rakes, that never stop till the horse does. These were once sold at twelve dollars singly; now they go for seven or eight. But this year the spring tooth, at eleven dollars, is all the fancy; and it is expected to work on the roughest meadows, a pring teeth never break.

The cheap old plain shovel rake, that sweeps the hay cleaner than any that have been made, is nearly overlooked, because there is less of mystery in it than in many others; and our farmers have all along supposed it a mysterious matter to collect hay in heaps by any other power than the hand rake.

From 20 to 30 minutes are sufficient to clear an acre completely when the surface is tolerably smooth, and when no more than one ton is cut on the acre. Yet a farmer expects one man to rake by hand no more than one acre during the afternoon.

The time will come when farmers will use the roller nore freely as preparatory to the rake, and where a four or five dollar instrument will be as efficient as one that costs eleven or twelve: farmers have not much leisure in July to examine and compare tools; and at no other senson will they be likely to see a horse rake in action. Farmers are prudent and cautious of introducing new modes, and well they may be, for new modes are not always best, and actual trial is best .- Maine Cul-

Mr. Estor—In a communication to the Essex Register of Thursday, I stated that a sprinkling of Meteors appeared to me on the morning of the 11th inst. during a nocturnal excursion to the western part of our good town, on professional business, and ventured to add, that by counting the number seen by me in a given time, and information derived from others, that probably during the 6 hours, commencing at 10 o'clock, P. M., of the 10th formation derived from others, that probably during the foliate, commencing at 10 o'clock, P. M., of the 10th inst., and ending at 4 o'clock, A. M., of the 11th, there probably might have been seen, had their been a swill-clent number of eyes employed during that time to watch every part of the starry heavens, 384 Meteors, and suggerted a doubt whether the like exhibition, which equatifies not had problemed back the starry had been seen.

which scientific men had predicted had come off two days earlier or whether that display might not be preliminary to a grander one on the 13th. To this I now add the following Postscript:

During a portion of the two succeeding nights, I have been a night-walker, and beautifully clear star-light nights they were. On the evening of the 11th, I saw

NEW Guide for travelners through the United States of America, containing a description of nights they were. On the evening of the 11th, I saw one Meteor only, others have told me that they saw several. But on the morning of this day, the 13th, during the half hour ending a few minutes after 3 o'clock, in a small portion of the Heavens, viz: from near the Seven Stars in the S. E. to a little west of South, I counted 24 Meteors less brilliant and shooting more irregularly than those I saw on Wednesday morning, all running towards the horison, but the track of some was nearly at right angles with that of others. We may therefore conclude that the prediction of science, that an unusual number of Meteors would be seen on the 13th of Angust, has been well sustained by the fact, as we shall probably soon learn from those indefatigable observers at Yale College, who have hitherto given the most valuable information on this interesting subject.

CRARY'S AMBREINE SOAP.—This superior Compound has now been sometime in general use, and so far it has obtained for itself a reputation never surpassed by any article, either foreign or demestic. The superior qualities of this Soap are durability, richness and soltness or lather, mild and soothing effects to the skin, and its own peculiar properties for softening the beard.—From the experience he has had, and the numerous testimonials of others in its favor, the proprietor feels warranted in saying that the Ambreine Soap will equal if not surpass any other Soap or Cream now in use, in all the qualities necessary to a Shaving Soap.

One pot is warranted to last a person a year to shave every day; thereby making it a cheaper article than most of the French Creams, as well as otherwise most desirable. Since, I have taken LORRAINE'S PILLS and now every body tells me that I am well;—I feel aswell as ever I did.

J. E. S. McKEY.

Portland, Me., Nov. 7th, 1843 Sir. Please send us one gross of Lorraine's Pills, we have sold all we had last. They have given very good satisfaction, better than any other pills which we have in our market. I think in a short time they will take the place of others. We have had no fault found with them whatever; but, on the contra ry, they have been praised loudly. I think we could have quite a number of highly respectable cer ificates from our citizens.

Respectfully yours, E. MASON.

From Dr. John C. Warren, of Boston.

Having had occasion to observe, that some persons afficted with Hernia, having suffered much from the want of skilful workmen in accommodating Trusses to the pecharities of their cases, I have taken pains to inform myself of the competency of Mr. J. F. Foster, to supply the deficiency occasioned by the death of Mr. Beath.—After some months of observation of his work, I am satisfied that Mr. Foster is well acquainted with the manufacture of these instruments, and ingenious in accommodating them to the variety of cases which occur. I feel myself called upon to recommend him to my professional brethren, and to the public, as a person well fitted to their wants in regard to these important articles.

I have sent many patients to be fitted with Trusses and Abdominal Supporters, by James F. Foster, and he has unformly given full satisfaction in their application.

The benefit of such instruments is often lost, in consequence of their imperfect construction, and from neglect up properly fitting them; on this account, I am in the habit of sending patients to Mr. Foster, confidently believing that he will give them a good article, and see that they are well fitted.

MY MOTHER. BY A.B.F.

gazed upon her form, now cold in Death's embrace, And thought of what she'd taught me of heaven a resting place,

Where spirits disencumbered of earthly clay and mould, Would wear a crown of glory, a crown of starry gold.

She told me of a city whose walls were jewels bright, A habitation for the just who dwelt in glorious light, And also that there was no need of sun or moon shine,

For God the Lamb would light it with glory all divine. The gates she said were never shut, and night will ne'er all known be known before the To cast its sable mantle round those streets of shining gold,

.A crystal stream, she spoke of that through this place will flow, And also of a tree of life which on its banks will grow.

She told me too she'd wait for me when my work on earth was done.

On the confines of the heavenly land she'd haste and bid ckly round

Llong to join with angels to sing the heavenly song.

From the Saturday Rambler. SOLITUDE.

BY AMBROSE W. LELAND. I never loved the haunts of men, My spirit sinks in sadness when I mingle with the heartless crowd. The low and rude, the high and proud, Where vice ascends on gilded wing, Disdaining many a fairer thing,-Where virtue's trampled to the dust By foul deception, avarice, lust; These form no fitting place for me, O Solitude, I sigh for thee!

I love to rise ere yet 'tis light, To watch the dusky shades of night Depart, while nature, fresh and fair, Diffuses fragrance through the air;-To seek the blushing of the rose, Awaking from its sweet repose; With vigor raise its blooming head To morn's first rays, so sweetly shed O'er all that nature claims her own,-O, why not gaze on these alone?

I love to seek the woody glade, The balmy breeze, refreshing shade, To watch the streamlet rippling on, To listen to the wild bird's song; To gaze on e'en the smallest flower That rears its head neath shady bower,-Where vice and misery are unknown, I fain would seek a rural home; If Solitude its name could be, Then, Solitude, I sigh for thee.

> From the Evening Mirror. AUTUMN.

The flowers begin to fade, and soon The leaves will sear and fall-For paler grows the summer moon That glummers through the hall.

And darker clouds are floating past The golden-tinted sky, And colder sweeps the fitful blast, Like sullen spirits, by.

How brief and fragile is their lot, Those bright and gentle things. Which yesterday were, to-day are not, Like dreams with rapid wings.

It scarcely seems an hour hath flown Since Spring was here in bloom: Yet, half of summer's glory strown, Lies mouldering for the tomb.

But flowers and leaves revive again When Spring anew appears, And only man, mid grief and pain, . Has no renewing years.

Each Spring and Summer with their light, Each Autumn darkly chill. Each Winter with its robe of white, But makes him frailer still.

God grant there is a gentle Spring, A golden Summer-time, Where we shall have an angel's wing And live in childhood's prime.

PERILOUS VOYAGE—NARROW ESCAPE.

We have read many thrilling accounts of escapes from the dangers of the sens, but we recollect of none more wonderful than that which occurred last week, in the vicinity of Hampton Beach.

On Thursday night, it will be recollect, occurred a most violent N. E. storm, which continued through the taining three young men, two of them (John Morrill and excursion to Rye Beach and back. The boat reached want of a fair wind; and the hoat continued beating a- him, in default of which he should the next morning pay dark. At about 10 P. M. the storm commenced—the to meet again next morning, and give an honest acwind blew a tempest, and the sea was rough, while the count of their proceedings at home so far as related to darkness shut the land entirely from view. In this way the payment of the bill. it then continued for several hours, during which time they anchored twice, and at each time lost an anchor, and then, were compelled to keep at sea. As a last resort the hoat was put away for Portsmouth, where they hoped to make a harbor. It was now about 12 o'clock at night, the storm still increasing, and while Morrill and Caswell were in their berths sick, Ryan, who was at the helm, discovered breakers, and immediately giving the alarm, the boat struck on a ledge of Rocks, a mile from the shore, and nearly opposite the fish houses in Hampton. As soon as the boat struck, all three jumped upon the ledge, while every wave dashed the boat violently ngainst the rocks and stove her in two. At a moment when the sea threw the boat towards the ledge Morrill and Caswell got upon two peices of the wreck, and went adrift. They continued floating about for some time, the sea all the while making, a complete breach over them, until at last they found themselves in shoul water still clinging to the wreck. With a great deal of difficulty, and after being nearly exhausted, they finally reached the beach in safety. DISBUDDING FTUIT TREES. The increasing attention to the cultivation of superior sorts of fruit, gives additional interests to such hints as emanate from really practical men. In Maund's Botannic Garden and Fruit_ ist for June, the subject of disbudding fruit trees at this season is so pratically treated, that a hint or two from t must be useful. It is founded on the principle of 'orevention is better than curo.' By disbudding trees early in the summer, the growth of the superfluous wood is prevented, and the whole power of the tree is thrown into that portion which is retained as useful for bearing! It will be clear even to the unlearned in these matters, that this system must be superior to permitting the tree to exhaust itself on that which is to be cut away. Another evident advantage arises from the light being fully admitted to act on and properly ripen the wood that s retained; for it is stated 'light is more especially required to act on leaves belonging to embryo bads or spurs which are ultimately to produce the fruit.' We give one other extract from amongst these directions, very useful for those to remember who cut or direct the cutting of trees, many of which are pruned by those possessing no knowledge of the subject. 'The plum, apricot, pear, apple, and the red and white currents, are instances of fruit trees bearing principally on spurs, whilst the raspberry, black current, vine, peach, and morello cherry produce the chief of their crops on the young shoots.'

THE TOLLY HUSBANDS

Three jolly husbands, out of the country, by the names of Tim Watson, Joe Brown, and Bill Walker, sat late one evening drinking at a village tavern, until

The next morning Walker and Brown were at their posts, but it was some time before Watson made his aupearance.

Walker began first.

'You see when I entered my house, the candle was out and the fire gave but a glimmering light, I came near walking into a pot of batter, that the pancakes where to be made of this morning. THE PHILOSOPHY OF DROWNING.—Man is the stance of success in the cultivation of the cranberry only animal that drowns naturally. He does so because without a thick coating of sand (not a mixture of sand he is endowed with reason; that is to say with a large and loam) was first spread over the surface. GEN. TAYLOR AND THE PRSIDENCY.

By the tone of the various letters which have been placed before the public as coming from the pen of Gen. Taylor, it would seem to be his intention, if the people should select him as a candidate for the office of Chief Magistrate, to maintain a crafty non-committal on all the important political questions which agitate the country. He would desire to receive the united and willing support and suffrages of the people and he assures them that he will consent to be considered a candidate, only so far as the people, independent of party desire him to

The trial of M. Pellapra terminated on the 23d. The proceedings were little more than formal accused having already confessed.

M. Pellapra admitted his guilt in offering a bribe of 100.000 francs to a member of the Cabinet; and in doing so, he burst into tears. After some deliberation, the Court sentenced the accused to civil degradation, and a fine of 10,000 francs. The fine was paid in the course of the evening, and the prisoner was released.

Although the judgment of the court was not delivered till five o'clock, M. Pellapra was the same evening seen in his box at one of the theatres; where he seemed to enjoy an excellent comedy with as much gusto as if he had not been engaged in the tragedy of the mosning.

The bark sunk in about thirty minutes. Immediately after the collision, Captain Patten sent his boat, and wi h one boat from the bark, picked up thirty-six persons. One hundred and seventy-two persons perished, among whom was the captain, Arnest Andreas Moberg." All the survivors that were saved were picked up from the surface of the water. One cause why so few were thus saved was that almost all of them had, when the cry went round that she was sinking, seized their belts of gold and silver and tied them arround their waists; that boats could reach them. The shrieks which went up from the sinking vessel were most appulling. The Captair it is said, had some $1500 in gold about his person, and of course the weight of it was sufficient to sink him. The citizens of Boston, of course lost no time in ren dering immediate relief to the sufferers. Mr. James K. Mills sent on board a quantity of clothing for the femules

RUMORED RESIGNATION OF THE POPE. The Augsburgh Gazette contains a strange report that the hinted at is his desire to draw out of his meditated relooking to the efficacy with which the General of the Jesuits frightened the King of Sardmin, we were inclined As a counterballance, however, we learn that very few to think that the Augsburgh Gazette has some reason for

> DR. EMMONS ON PREACHING .- A young man having preached for the Dr. one day was anxious to get a word of applause for his labor of love. The grave Dr. however did not introduce the subject, and his brother was obliged to bait the hook for him. "I hope, sir, I did not weary your people by the length of my sermon to day." "No, sir, not at all, nor by the death either." Lastly the young man was silent .- Norfolk Democrat

A young lady, residing in the upper part of Philadelphia, the daughter of a bank officer, when going to hed Tuesday night, was about closing her shorter, when she was horrified by laying her hand on an immense snake, which with expanded jaws was peering into the apartlong and some six inches in circumference. Hardly had he been killed before a neighbor came rushing breath-

SATURDAY EVENING .- The seven-spoked wheel round once more. This is the night when the weary cease from their labor, when the thoughts of the young folks revert to the homes they have left, and The Governor and Council of New Hampshire the good housekeeper having finished her work betimes, word denotes. The little ones clustering around, climb his knees, to share the envied kiss and enjoy the The rate of taxation adopted in the city of affection, which unlike grosser riches, springs up more plentifully in proportion as it is freely, given away. Ocean, sailors and travellers will think of "home matters" and toast "sweethearts and wives."-Buffalo

> ONE OF THE WILLS .- An eccentric gentleman is Philadelphia, lately deceased, left behind him a curious will, from which the following is said to be an extract;

"Whereas, my daughter refused me a night's lodging in her house when I had no place of abode. I therefore leave her one cent, and to her henpecked husband half a cent as a man who allows his wife to insult her father in his presence is no man. To my other children I recommend a perusal of the Fifth Commandment. To my mother-in-law I bequeath six cents, provided the buys therewith a halter to hang herself, for having swindled the Elect out of a gold watch she wears under a pretence of benevolence and Christian conduct and behaviour."

NATURE'S FAREWELL. BY MRS. HEMANS. The beautifut is vanished, and returns not. Coleridge's Wallenstein.

A youth rode forth from his childhood's home. Through the crowded paths of the world to roam. And the green leaves whisper'd, as he pass'd Wherefore, thou dreamer ! away so fast? Knew'st thou with what thou are parting here,

Long would'st thou linger in doubt and fear: Thy heart's free laughter, thy sunny hours, Thou hast left in our shades with the Spring's wild

"Under the arch by our mingling made, Thou and thy brother have gaily played; Ye may meet again where ye roved of yore, But as ye have met there-oh never more."

On rode the youth; and the boughs among, Thus the wild birds o'er his pathway sung:-*Wherefore so fast unto life away? Thou art leaving forever, thy joy in our lay !

"Thou may'st come to the summer woods again, And thy heart have no echo to greet this strain ; Afar from the foliage its love will dwell, A change must pass o'er thee-Farewell, farewell!"

On rode the youth-and the founts and streams Thus mingled a voice with his joyous dreams:-We have been thy playmates through many a day, Wherefore thus leave us?-Oh! yet delay

"Listen but once to the sound of our mirth; For thee 'tis a melody passing from earth! Never again wilt thou find in its flow The peace it could once on thy heart bestow.

"Thou wilt visit the scenes of thy childhood's glee. With the breath of the world on thy free spirit; Passion and sorrow its depths will have stirr'd, And the singing of waters be vainly heard.

"Thou wilt bear in our gladsome laugh no part; What should it do for a burning heart? Thou wilt bring to the banks of our freshest rill. Thirst which no fountain on earth may still!

"Farewell!-when thou comest again to thine own. Thou wilt miss from our music its loveliest tone! Mournfully true is the tale we tell-Yet on, fiery dreamer-Farewell, farewell!"

And a something of gloom on his spirit weigh'd, As he caught the last sounds of his native shade; But he knew not, till many a bright spell broke. How deep were the oracles nature spoke!

Like a sweet lute that lingers In silence alone. Unswept by light fingers, Scarce murmurs a tone: My young heart resembles That late light and free. Till o'er its chords trembles Those memories of thee.

The bright rose when faded Flings forth o'er its tomb, Its velvet leaves, laded With silent persume. Thus round me will hover, In grief or in glee, Till life's dream be over, Sweet memories of thee!

[From Sharpe's Magazine.] THE WILL:

A TALE OF THE LAST CENTURY.

The lady who related the outline of the following singular story, heard it told in her youth, by no means as a fiction, but as a real occurrence. She even knew the name of the old northern family concerned in it, but that, with the exact dates, she has now forgotten, if she over knew the latter; and having never written ture.' down the story, she has no means of recovering them. However, from her express men ion of a tight wig, worn by the benevolent old hero of the tale, we have fixed the occurrence not earlier than the last century.

year 1730, a barrister of the temple was sitting reading is this?' when the opening of a door, and his servant's announcea person of a very gentlemanly, but extremely old-fash- years.' ioned appearance. He was dressed in a grave-colored suit, of antique cut; a neat, tight, gray whig surrounded his serious, and even solemn physiognomy; silk name." stockings, rolled at the knee; enormous shoe-buckles of gold; a cane, headed with the same metal, and a broad- his hat, his very ring are there.' brimmed and uncocked hat completed his equipment; which was in the fashion of the last year of William the Third, or the first of his successor. Having stiffly powed in the exact way prescribed by the etiquette of that era to which he seemed to belong, he took posses sion of the chair offered him by his host; and, after a preparatory ahem, thus began, in a low and serious

'I think, sir, you are the lawyer employed by the S- family, whose property in Yorkshire you are, herefore, aware is about to be sold."

I have, sir,' answered the barrister, 'full instructions and power to complete the disposal of it, which, though painful duty to me, must be performed.' 'It is a duty you may dispense with,' said the visitor waving his hand, 'the property need not be sold.'

'May I presume to ask, sir, whether you are any relation to the family ? If so, you must be acquainted with the absolute necessity of selling it, in consequence of the claim of another branch of the family, just reurned from beyond the sea who, as heir at law, is naturally possessor of the estate, in default of a will to the contrary; and who desires its value in money, instead of the land. The present possessor is unable to buy it, and must therefore depart.'

'You are mistaken,' replied the old gentleman rather estity; you seem not to know the will of Mr. S----' reat-grandfather, by which he not on ly left that, his estate to his favor ite grand-son, this gentleman's father, or so atriocious, or shocking to God and man. The but even entailed it on his great-great-grand-son.

·Such a will, sir,' said the barrister, 'was indeed supposed for many years, to exist; and in virtue of it, Mr S-has, until now, enjoyed the property, but, on the claimant's application, a renewed search having been made for it. either the belief proves wholly unfounded, or it has been lost or destroyed. Cabinets, chests, every oom inhabited, have been ransacked in vain. Mr. S-has now given up all hopes of finding it; the sale is to be completed in the course of next week; and the fine old place must pass into the hands of strangers.'

You are mistaken once again, young man, said the granger, striking his cane on the floor, 'I say sir the will exists. Go, immediately,' continued he, in an authoritative tone; travel night and day. You may save an old family from disgrace and ruin. In the end room of the left wing, now uninhabited, is a closet in the wall. 'We have looked there,' uninterrupted the barrister.

Silence, sir; there is a large chest: that chest has a false bottom, and underneath that is the deed. I am certain of what I say: I saw the paper deposited there; am not now personally known to the proprietor of S-Hall; but I am his relation, and have his welfare at which the wretched slaves are forced to undergo. heart. Neglect not to follow my advice.'

So saying, the old gentleman arose, again bowed, and on which the lawyer had remarked a very brilliant ring, he descended the stairs, and departed, leaving the barwhen he thought of the old gentleman's grave manner,

There are different kinds of nose-beauty and eye-beauty; but Grecian noses are very heavy. You seldom see a lively or animated person with a Grecian nose, if there be such a nose as the Greek statues-parallel with the brow. A straightbacked nose, with a point neither hooked nor turned up (retrousse-snub-nose) is accounted best for a woman For a man, a hampback, or pump-handle nose, or any kind, will do, provided it will be large enough, and da not show the nostrils erect, like double windows of an Anglo-Saxon belfrey. All sorts of eyes are beautiful or ugly when well or, ill set. But blue eyes, like Miss Pardoe's are accounted ugly all the world over. Miss Pardoe was cursed by a Turk, for looking at his donkey green or light huzel, with a greenish tint, look best in plump and ruddy countenances; and, therefore, are well adapted for children and stout people. THE RECENT ELECTIONS.

The result, in brief, of the recent elections, according to the present advices, appears to be as follows:

Kentucky has chosen to Congress six Whigs and four Locos. Last year 7 Whigs and 3 Locos. Indiana, 4 Whigs and 6 Locos, Last year 2 Whigs and 6 Locos.

North Carolina, 6 Whigs and 3 Locos. Last year 3 Whigs and 6 Locos.

Tennessee, 6 Whigs and 5 Locos. Last year 5 Whigs and 6 Locos. The Whigs have the Governor, Mr Jarnagin whose term expires.

Iowa sends two Locos.

Of the members of Congress already chosen, 110 are Whigs 94 Locos, and Mrs Levin, of Pa., (Native,) Peric of New York, and Lahm of Ohio. According to the classification in the express, 113 are Whigs, 90 Locos, and 4 doubtful or independents. The House numbers 228 members, 115 constituting a majority. Maine is still to choose 4; Mississippi 4; Lousiana 4; Maryland 6; Rhode Island 1; Michigan 1; Ohio 1-Total 21,-Should Wisconsin accept a State Constitution in season, two more Members will be added to the next Congress.

WORCESTER.

This central town, so appropriately termed the Heart of the Commonwealth, is now in a condition of unexampled prosperity and advancement. This is owing no less to the active and enterprising character of its population, than to its favorable position as the point where the great lines of Railroads meet and diverge to different parts of New England. We see by the Worcester Spy, that according to a recent enumeration of the ratable polls, the population at this time noust exceed 14,-000, and the Editor thinks, "that the census of 1850 will show a greater per cent increase, since 1840, than any other town of similar size in the State."

We may therefore confidently predict that Worcester will be found next winter knocking at the door of the Legislature for a City Charter. We know of no place where a more august and dignified city government could the organized. The citizens could make their selection of Mayor from among venerable Ex-Governors, and its Board of Aldermen may be composed of the R. was an annual damage of $800 to the establishmen gravest Judges of the Commonwealth; while for Com- which would make the damage to the e-tate $5000 b. mon Council-men there may be found any number of Honorable Senators and Cenncellers.

with a very distressing accident, says the Traveller Hills,—Plates with letter press. Mary and Anna, a about a week since, which may affect his life. He was on a visit to a neighboring town, and was playing with a cent, by tossing it up into the air and catching it in his mouth. At last he swallowed the cent, which finally lodged horizontally across the passage way. All attempts to dislodge it have been, thus far, fruitless. The only nourishment which can be adminestered to the lad is gals, Quartettes, &c., selected and arranged gruel, which filters through the edges of the cent.

THE FIRST LAWYER IN LYNN.-A corresponden of the Lynn News who is furnishing some "ReminisChoirs, Clubs, &c., supplied by the dozen at the pubcences" for that paper, says that the first lawyer who lisher's price, at the Book and Music establishment settled in Lynn, was our lamented citizen, lately deceas- of ed, Benjamin Merrill, Esq. The writer adds: "He came here in 1803, and took an office in Elijah Downmg's house, on the common. He had been here but CORNELIUS & LEFAVOUR, a short time, when several of the grave citizens waited on him with a request that he should remove from town. They thought the people would get along better without lawyers, He took it in good part, and with his accustomed suavity told them that it was far from his want of any article of CLOTHING. THE WRONG MANHUNG.—A young printer, named Boyington, who served his time in the office of the New Haven Palladium, was hung a few years since in Alabama, upon a charge of having murdered his companion. with whom he was travelling. He protested h s innocente but without avail. Recently the landlord in whose house the murder was committed, confessed on his death hed! Boying on was a young man of fine talents and prepostesing appearance, whose guilt was deemed conclusive only from the fact that he was the last person seen with the murdered man.

Reminiscences of My Childhood. I cannot but remember such things were.-SHAKSPEARE

> I remember, I remember, When I was a little boy,

One fine morning in September Uncle brought me home a toy;

I remember how he patted Both my cheeks in kindliest mood; "There," said he, 'you little fat head, There's a top because you're good?'

Grandmamma—a shrewd observer— I remember gazed upon My new top, and said with fervor, 'Oh! how kind of Uncle John!'

While Mamma, my form caressing,-In her eye the tear-drop stood-Read me this fine moral lesson, 'See what comes of being good!'

I remember, I remember, On a wet and windy day, One cold morning in December, I stole out and went to play;

1 remember Billy Hawkins Came, and with his pewter squirt, Squibb'd my pantaloons and stockings

To my mother for protection I ran quaking every limb: She exclaimed with fond affection, 'Gracious goodness! look at Jim!'

Till they were all over dirt!

Pa cried, when he saw my garment,-'Twas a newly purchased dress-"Oh! you nasty little warment, How came you in such a mess?'

Then he caught me by the collar-Cruel only to be kind-And, to my exceeding dolour, Gaye me several slaps behind,

Grandmama, while yet I smarted, As she saw my evil plight, Said-'twas rather stony-hearted-"Little rascal! sarved him right!"

I remember, I remember, From that sad and solemn day Never more in dark December Did I venture out to play!

And the moral which they taught, I Well remember: Thus they said, "Little boys when they are naughty, Must be whipp'd and sent to bed!

Belief, how dear! how sweet! With it death has no terrors; for death, without forgetting or being forgotten, is but a sweet sleep, but calm repose after long toil. SALES OF LEATHER.

The sales of Leather which have been made in Boston, within a few weeks, have been at advanced prices. The market is firm, and there is but a light stock in the hands of dealers. The tanners in this vicinity although so much encouraged by the recent advance in the prices of manufactured leather, that they have commenced with er & Brother, and Capt Saml Gore, of Boston, and to less prevented from reaping any very essential benefit for the East India trade, and is pronounced the finest from the improved state of the leather market, by the vessel, in model, material and finish, ever launched in uncommonly high price of bark, there having been but a Belfast. small quantity brought up from the Eastward the present s ason, by the coasting vessels, most of this craft being engaged in freighting lumber.

We noticed in the Herald a report of an auction sale in New York City, last week, which was attended by a very large company. The whole catalogue consisting of 8490 sides, was sold at good prices. Hemlock good stamp, light and middling weights, 16 3-8c a 18c; do heavy, 15c a 16 1-2c; good damaged, 13 3-8c a 15c; poor do. 9 a 9 3-8c.

A little curiosity has been excited by the publishment in our last number, of the unfortunate adventure of a clergyman who resides in a town, adjoining Salem; and much inquisitiveness is manifested as to who might be the hero of the affair. We do not think it would in any public the name of the unlucky gentleman, and therefore shall not do so. We trust that all those who read the paragraph will find sufficient satisfaction for their labor in the laugh the comical situation of the clergyman immersed in mud, will provoke, even though they may across the Merrimack in this place, between this present not be allowed the privilege of laughing at him.

A friend at our elbow, has recently related to us ano her clergic 1 idventure, which we think equally comical and amusing as the one we published last week .--In this incident the parties concerned were natives of Sa- Road across seven mil e river. lem. The story runs thus:

It was the work of some half hour to deliver the unfortunate adventurers from their unwelcome position which was done, and they then proceeded on their way, and at a late hour reached their destination where the object of their journey was accomplished.

LARGE TREE

During the present week, another of those large Buttonwood (or as they are called at the West and South. Sycamore) trees has been felled to the ground. The one we now allude to, was one of the two at the corner of Main and Pierpont Sts., which formerly stood in front of the mansion of the late Mr. Ward Poole. Its companions was cut down a few years ago. The strange, and as yet unaccounted for disease which has for several years affected this kind of tree, had so far for several years and could have and fair proportions that uesponed them of their beauty and fair proportions that we part with them their beauty and fair proportions that if they remained in their full stateliness and prime.

This tree was the largest of any of those in that neighborhood, measuring at the ground 16 feet 3 inches, and three feet from the ground, 14 feet 2 inches. The two trees were planted there previous to the Revolution, by Mr. Pierpont, the former proprietor of the estate.

We understand that the horse which was stolen from the stable of Mr. Phelps, last week, was traced as far have been the thief, was arrested in Portsmouth, and lodged in Portsmouth jail.

The English papers are unusually barren of political intelligence.

The community at Liverpool were thrown into an excited state on the 18th ult., by a report that Louis Phillippe had been shot at by an assassin and killed. The report, although communicated by telegraph, was proved to be false, just in time to prevent the rumor being taken out to this country by the Caledonia.

At the official meeting of the Bank of England Directors, on the 5th inst., the minimum rate of discount was declared to be 54 per cent. At this rate only short dated bills were discounted, the rates reaching even 64 for long-dated paper.

IRELAND. The correspondent of the Traveller says:

The reports from Ireland respecting the reappearance of disease in the potato crop are still contradictory. The potatoes are represented as generally improving. It is stated, however, that the quantity planted in Ireland does not reach three eights of the usual quantity, and they are being dug and consumed, as a summer vegetable, from the utter want of confidence in their keeping; there will, therefore, be as small a quantity available consumption in the present year, after the month of No vember—even though the disease should entirely citappear—as there was last year. The London Economist, n an article upon the subject, says, that there will be a great additional quantity of oats and barley, and that Indian Corn will continue.

FATAL ACCIDENT IN MARBLEHEAD. A daughter of Mr. J. Jarvis, aged about seven years, was run over in Marblehead, on Tuesday morning, by a wagon, and died in about half an hour.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE. The Boston Mailsays that Mr. John Pike left Boston on Monday the 23d ult. for Lynn and Salem, arrived in Salem and put up his horse in the afternoon at the City Hotel, since which time no traces have been had of him. Mr Pike is a native of Wakefield, N. H., about 30 years of age, five feet ten inches high, dark complexion, large whiskers blak hair, large full eyes, and walks a little lame; he had a considerable sum of money about him. He has resided for three or four years in Boston and vicinity, and has been engaged in the butter and fruit husiness. Any information concerning him will be gratefully received at the office of the Boston Mail.

APPOINTMENTS. Thomas Needham, Esq., of Salem, and Dan Weed, Esq of Lawrence, have been appointed, by the Governor and Council, Public Administrators for the County of Essex.
